AUTHOR ARRESTED AS SLAYER

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Governor Dix at Albany today designated Justice John W. Goff to hold an extraordinary term of the Supreme Court for the trials growing out of the murder of Herman Rosenthal. District Attorney Whitman asked for the court to be convened September 10, and the request was granted.

Governor Dix issued the following statement:

I have promptly complied with the request of District Attorney Whitman for the appointment of an extraordinary term of the Supreme Court in New York city and have selected Justice Goff to preside at such term, in the belief that his designation will be accepted as an assurance that the court will be conducted with absolute integrity, courage and persistency.

While there has been no reason to doubt the purpose and determination of the local authorities to thoroughly investigate the shameful conditions which are declared to exist and to prosecute therefor through the ordinary channels, I had already come to the conclusion that the ends of justice would be best served by the convening of an extraordinary term of court for the express purpose both of aiding such investigation and of providing for a speedy and vigorous prosecution of indictments which may be found, and for that reason I am free to express my satisfaction that it is now possible for me to carry out my convictions without risk of possible embarrassment to the officers of the prosecuting attorney.

I have, of course, been aware that the District Attorney was engaged in a determined effort to ascertain the facts and bring the guilty to punishment, and that the Heads of Aldermen has already entered upon an investigation of the police system.

Inquiry Must Be Fearless.

But whatever may be the scope and extent of these investigations, I believe that an immediate, determined and fearless inquisition under Grand Jury auspices and authority set in

EXPOSED ALDERMAN SOLD PAL

Parallelling the story of the play "Alias Jimmy Valentine" in many ways is the news from Philadelphia today of the resignation from office of City Councilman "William Burke," with the confession that he is the reformed Boston convict, Benjamin H. Tripp, who served ten years in Charlestown State Prison for breaking and entering many stores and houses in this city.

Boston police dubbed him the "Prince of Flat Workers," and considered his arrest and conviction in 1896 a big scalp.

After being released from Charlestown in 1906 Tripp went to Philadelphia, changed his name to "Michael Burke," led a straight life and was getting along all right until recognized by a fellow-crook in when had not him in Charlestown prison.

"This old 'pal,'" Tripp says, blackmailed him till he was driven by despair to resign from the City Council and tell the whole story.

Like "Jimmy Valentine."

"Jimmy Valentine, in the play of that name, reformed after being pardoned from prison, became a bank officer and was persistently followed by a detective who finally let him go after 'Valentine' had betrayed his ability to open a safe with a time lock, in order to save a child's life.

The story of Benjamin Tripp is similar in the man's success in his reformed life, even getting elected to public office. In this case, however, Tripp, according to his story, has told all to secure release from blackmail.

The Boston police first came across Tripp's trail when a series of daring robberies roused the whole department. Virgenius detective work finally led to Benjamin H. Tripp being arrested in October, 1895, in a Shawmut avenue lodging house. On December 16, the same year, he was sentenced to a term of from seven to ten years at Charlestown.

The Boston police do not know Tripp's previous history. But Philadelphia dispatches today quote Tripp as saying he was a street waif on the New York East Side, grew up with thieves and pickpockets, left West, associated with a bolder class of criminals, but never became a thorough-going "yegg." He reformed in New York, took up mining and sneak-thieving and finally came over to Boston, where he robbed successfully till Police Inspector Geddis finally caught him.

Promised to Be Straight.

Being sent to Charlestown effected Tripp's reform, but also led to present undoing. When he left Charlestown in 1906 he assured Warden Bridges he would lead a straight life. He went to Philadelphia and was honest.

But in Charlestown prison Tripp met another crook with whom he became friendly. Eventually this other man came to Philadelphia.

Meanwhile Tripp, as "Michael Burke," was a straight-living Philadelphia wood carver. He had learned the trade in prison. He settled in the north-eastern section of the Quaker City. He worked hard, saved his earnings and finally was able to set up in the retail cigar and tobacco line.

"Michael Burke" met a girl, loved and married her. They have one child.

"Michael Burke" is a good seller. He mixed with his fellow-men at political gatherings. His power of memory attracted attention of ward leaders. "Burke" was interested in the new reform party, being a "reformed" man himself.

Last Fall he was elected to the City Council on the reform ticket, headed by Mayor Blankenburg. He had put Benjamin H. Tripp, the convict, far behind him in thought.

Shortly after election "Michael Burke" was appalled to meet and be recognized by the old "pal," a fellow-prisoner who had formed in Charlestown prison. The "pal" was not "reformed," according to Tripp's own story. He demanded money under pain of exposure. Tripp yielded blackmail, hoping to protect his name, his home and his family. The old convict was not to be satisfied with a little. He "bled" Tripp mercilessly.

Finally Tripp realized that exposure was preferable to blackmail. He preferred to take chances, with his new and clean record to back him, than live in terror of this former "pal."

NEW LIGHT ON "ENOCH ARDEN"

New developments today in the divorce suit filed by Milton A. Woodbury, cafe manager, against his wife, Elizabeth T. Woodbury, on the ground that she had a husband living when he married her, cast new complications which make the story of "Enoch Arden" simple in comparison.

In his divorce libel Mr. Woodbury asserted that when he married Mrs. Elizabeth T. Beals on June 12, 1910, he supposed she was the widow of Charles A. Beals. He declares that Beals is still living, that he was located in Philipsdale, R. I., under the name of Charles Murray.

But it became known today that Mrs. Woodbury, to call her by the name she now bears, has filed a petition for divorce from Beals, her first husband. Mrs. Woodbury cited this petition, July 25 not in the Suffolk District Court.

Mrs. Woodbury is in the peculiar position of suing her first husband for divorce before end of being sued for divorce by her second husband.

The ireful outbuss of "Enoch Arden" never indulged in any such flights of poetic fancy as this, with its adornment of double divorce suits and other fine things.

Seeks Custody of Child.

In her petition for divorce Mrs. Woodbury, alias Mrs. Beals, claims that she was lawfully married to Beals at Attleboro, May 25, 1894, and that he deserted her on August 20, 1895, the day her minor child, Charles A. Beals, Jr., was born. She asks for the custody of the child.

The attorney is Frank H. Noyes of room No. 1140 Tremont Building.

John L. Dyer, attorney for Mr. Woodbury, told today how, through the agency of a detective, he traced Beals through Massachusetts, Maine, Vermont and Rhode Island, finally to locate him living under an assumed name. Beals is of a wealthy Lowell family, but under the name of Charles Murray, was working, when found, in a dye factory at Philipsdale, R. I.

Here is Mr. Dyer's statement of the facts in the strangely tangled story of Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury and Mrs. Elizabeth Beals.

"In 1910 I was employed by Mrs. Elizabeth T. Beals to obtain for her a divorce from her husband, Charles Beals, whom she had not seen for a number of years.

"I started an investigation to determine the whereabouts of Charles Beals. My first investigation took me to Lowell, Mass., where he has relatives. My agent questioned them and I corresponded with members of the family, with the result that we traced the trail to Auburn, Me.

"We found that Beals had remained there for some months and gone thence to Buffalo, Me. From there the trail came back to Lowell.

Thought Husband Dead.

"At this point, I reported to Mrs. Woodbury, who was then Mrs. Beals. The most recent clew I then had was dated several years back. I had no information later than 1905, and Mrs. Woodbury had heard on what she believed reliable authority, that her husband was dead.

"She inscribed me to discontinue the search. I did so and was paid for my services.

"A few weeks ago, Mr. Woodbury came to consult with me with reference to the possibility of securing a divorce from his wife. I talked the case over with him and then said I was not at all convinced that Beals was dead. I advised further investigation along this line.

"He consented, and we took up the two year old trail in Lowell.

"It led to Montpelier, Vt., and then doubled back to Lowell again. From Lowell we traced to Providence—Beals to a little park settlement outside, and from there to Philipsdale.

"There we found Beals, working under the name of Charles Murray. Questioned, he admitted his identity. Mrs. Woodbury has since seen him and admitted that he is her husband.

"The suit for annulment of course followed at once. I understand that divorce proceedings have also been begun by Mrs. Woodbury—or Beals—against Beals, her husband.

"These are the facts in the case as I know them. The trouble between Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury which led him to seek freedom I can only characterize as domestic difficulties. He is now thirty years old. She is six years older. Her first husband, I do not know. He has a cousin, Horace P. Beals, who has grown wealthy in the lumber business in Lowell."

President's Statement, Declaring He Would Not Attend, and Jealousies Change Plans.

It's going to be a big night at Pride's Crossing tonight, even if the lilyness of Henry Clay Frick's billion dollar laws feet does set North Shore society agog in the start of a social warfare.

The Frick party will be one of the biggest the North Shore has seen in many moons. None but millionaires are going to be present, and in the matter of lavish expense, why, the Pittsburgh steel magnate has started out to cut the widest swath that ever startled the staid old families from Beverly to Manchester-by-the-Sea. The lawn fete will have the feast of Lucullus and all the other famous festivities beaten forty ways.

But for all the money spent on carrying out the elaborate preparations, society

Wireless calls for help were picked up by United States cruisers seventy-five miles away at 2 a. m. At 5 o'clock they tried to raise the Pleiades but got no response. CONTEST OF ASTOR WILL IMPROBABLE

NEWPORT, Aug. 16.—From authentic sources it is learned here that there is not the slightest possibility of a contest of the will of John Jacob Astor by his young widow.

RUNAWAY CAR INJURES FIVE

AMESBURY, Aug. 16.—Five persons were injured, one man fatally, by a runaway trolley car which ran at breakneck speed down a steep grade for a mile and a half today, owing to a defective brake. Charles Congdon, aged forty-five, a painter, is at the local hospital with a fractured skull and other injuries.

Bertram Cook, aged fifteen, driver of a milk wagon, was tossed ten feet into the air when the car struck his wagon and scattered the milk all over the pavement. Young Cook was cut and bruised, but escaped serious injury.

Three boys were slightly injured in Amesbury square when the car sped through there, and was finally stopped by the emergency brake after it had reached level ground.

The car, carrying thirty-five workmen, was bound for Lake Attitash, a Summer colony. It was 7 o'clock when it reached the brow of the hill on Friend street. Motorman W. A. Bradley and Conductor Roy Peaslee, former Selectman at Plaistow, N. H., were in charge.

Suddenly the front brake refused to work. The rear brake was tried, causing the car to jump backward, and then the trolley was removed. This deadened both brakes, and with its own weight and that of the passengers the car quickly gathered speed on the steep incline.

It took the curve into Elm street at express speed. Charles Congdon, the painter, was crossing the street on his way to work when the runaway car tore down upon him. Before he could jump the running board struck him and one wheel grazed his head.

Then the car leveled into the milk wagon. It scattered pedestrians in the square and knocked down three men. All the passengers had jumped at the top of the hill.

David B. Farnsworth, a well-to-do magazine writer, who moved to New England two years ago from Chicago, was arrested today at his home in Bridgewater on a charge of killing Thomas Hagan, son of a well-known Bridgewater horseman, John Hagan. Farnsworth told the police he had fired a shotgun at Hagan in the belief that the latter was a chicken thief. Farnsworth was taken to Brockton and was arraigned there this afternoon.

Body Found on Road.

The arrest followed the finding of Hagan's dead body on the road, three-quarters of a mile away from the Farnsworth cottage. A trail of blood spots led to the writer's home. Farnsworth declared that he had been awakened by his pet dog, "Pee," after midnight and had lain in wait for a chicken thief. He said he had fired when Hagan was ten feet away, and that Mrs. Farnsworth, his wife, had fired a receiver into the air to scare the man off.

Farnsworth was charged with manslaughter and then taken to Brockton for arraignment.

In his sworn defence, Farnsworth declared that he had lost forty new chickens Monday night and twenty more last night. He raises prize fowls on his farm on High street.

"I feel sure I hit the man, but I did not know that the wound was fatal," said Farnsworth to Constable Elias Johnson, according to the latter's story.

Admits the Shooting.

Hagan's body was found by Scout Leach of Hanlon. Leach informed Edward and Joseph Hagan, brothers of the dead man, and they in turn notified Constable Johnson. The latter traced the bloodspots from the body to Farnsworth's home.

When he reached the cottage Farnsworth, who has lost considerable flesh and feed the constable that he had used his shotgun in shooting at a man whom he believed was stealing his chickens. Farnsworth was then taken into custody and placed in the Bridgewater lockup.

Both the writer and his wife were emphatic in their statements that there was no intention to slay Hagan. Hagan, now of a well-known family. The shiself had been employed as a country laborer in Bridgewater.

Medical Examiner Paine of Brockton viewed Hagan's body. Death was caused by a large wound in the side.

CHARLOTTE BRONTE INVENTED ROOSEVELT, SAYS MRS. ATHERTON

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 16.—Mrs. Gertrude Atherton, the California novelist, "took the stump" late last night to tell California's multi-browbeaten women wig in her opinion, they should vote for Woodrow Wilson.

Beginning with the announcement that "I cannot see much difference in the personal platforms of Wilson and Roosevelt," Mrs. Atherton delivered an epigrammatic attack upon Colonel Roosevelt and a vigorous defense of Governor Wilson. She said in part:

"Seventy years ago Charlotte Bronte invented Roosevelt, in the character of Rochester. Since that time women have loved Rochester, the man who was 100 per-sent. male. I confess that I have a smoldering affection of the type. Rochester was a colossal child—the self-confident man. Roosevelt is of that sort.

"Woodrow Wilson is a man who always exercises self-control. He will never be found acting like a bull moose.

CAPT. LORD ISSUES LONG STATEMENT

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 16.—In an attempt to vindicate himself, Captain Lord of the Leyland liner Californian, who was censured by American and British commissions on the Titanic disaster for his failure to go to the aid of the White Star liner, today published a lengthy article of self-defense. He explained the proceedings on board his ship on the night of the disaster, and declared that he hopes to remove what he considers an undeserved stigma upon his character as a man and a navigator.

BETTORS ASK 4 TO 1 AGAINST WILSON

HUNT FOR ROSENTHAL GUN MEN IN METHUEN

motion by executive order was imperatively demanded by the grave exigencies of what must be termed an unofficial indictment of the Metropolitan police system.

The citizenship of the entire State has been stirred by the shocking allegations of an alliance between the police and a certain class of lawbreakers in New York city.

If it is true that there exists a money traffic in officially priced crime, murder has finally become an incident. That fact, however terrible and terrifying, should be authoritatively determined and proclaimed in its every ascertainable detail, to the end that everything which has made such a shameful condition possible may be trampled upon and destroyed.

Must Punish the Guilty.

It goes without significance that everyone who may have participated in the levying, collection or division of a money tribute imposed as a consideration for police protection in breaking the law should be promptly be brought to justice and severely punished; and as no official misconduct could be more abhorrent than a deliberate act of murder under the alleged circumstances on the part of one or more persons, whose specific employment is for the preservation of order, the prevention of crime and the protection of life, failure to adequately punish such an atrocious deed would be too lamentable for words.

And yet, even if what the abominable things which have been charged are true I regard the punishment of an individual of vastly less importance with regard to the lasting welfare of the community and of society at large than the conditions which have at once led up to the final crime and at the same time made its consummation possible shall be pitilessly bared in a complete and unshrinking judicial inquiry.

If there actually exists an infamous crime syndicate, which has been so precisely charged, the punishment of a few individuals is only an incident in that broader justice which would as far as possible obliterate the stain and infamy of the past by sternly providing for a righteous future. Such a provision can be effectively made only after a most exhaustive and relentless investigation which shall result in a full disclosure of the facts.

Working on Two Clews.

The detectives under District-Attorney Whitman are chasing two separate clews to "Gib the Blood" and "Lefty Louie." One is in Methuen, Mass., and the other on the Great Lakes between Erie, Pa., and Duluth. A man told the Erie chief he thought he saw Louie and Gib, the latter disguised as a woman, in that city.

Four detectives are searching in Methuen, Mass., for the men who are supposed to have sent a postcard to "Bridgy" Webber.

Webber received the postcard enclosed in an envelope. The card read:

Dear Pal:
Do the best you can. We are all right. Your pals,
L. and G.

The imprisoned gambler showed the card to his counsel, Max Steuer, saying that he was convinced that it was Lefty Louie's writing.

Scheppe Expected Tonight.

Sam Scheppe, who has himself declared he is "the key to the Rosenthal investigation," is expected to arrive in New York tonight in the custody of agents of District Attorney Whitman.

The time of his arrival and the route has been kept secret for fear of an attack from some of the "gang's" minions.

Assistant District Attorney J. R. Rubin and party, taking Scheppe to New York, passed through Indianapolis early today. It was said the party would stop in New York State before going into New York city next week, possibly Syracuse, but Mr. Rubin declined to say where.

Scheppe was asleep in his berth, watched by Detectives, during the time the train stopped. Mr. Rubin said the route from New York city was to be kept secret to avoid, if possible, any interference from "outside interests."

Scheppe will be kept in hiding by Mr. Whitman, until he appears before the Grand Jury next week, at Farrytown.

Scheppe's testimony is the only thing lacking to the case against the men already under arrest, and against "Gib the Blood" and "Lefty Louie," according to District Attorney Whitman. Scheppe will probably testify before the Grand Jury next Tuesday and a blanket indictment is expected to follow.

The District Attorney, disgusted at the alleged apathy of the police, has announced that he will offer a $5,000 reward for the capture of the two alleged assassins of Rosenthal still at large.

NO ROW WITH SON, SAYS HAMMERSTEIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Both Oscar Hammerstein and others at the Victoria Theatre denied today that there was any foundation for a report that the noted impresario and his son, William, have quarreled, the latter giving up his connection with the theatre.

"Willie is a very sick man," said Oscar Hammerstein. "He has Bright's disease. When I came back from London and found how sick he was I made him go away to the mountains and rest."

'MARQUIS' CARRIES SANDWICH BOARDS

LONDON, Aug. 16.—There is now perambulating the streets of London a man who, attired in a frock coat and silk hat, both somewhat the worse for wear, carries sandwich boards on which is displayed this legend:

SOCIALIST TO GIVE KAISER WELCOME

BERNE, Switzerland, Aug. 16.—By a curious coincidence the first official welcome to the German Emperor when he crosses the frontier on September 3 to attend the Swiss army manoeuvres will be extended by the well-known Socialist leader, Herr Blocher, who has been charged to represent the federal president the government and the Canton of Basel.

COL. O. H. PAYNE SEEKS LOST HEALTH

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Although Colonel Oliver H. Payne completely divorced himself from all active business cares a year ago, the financial district is interested in the report of the former Standard Oil magnate's illness. POWERS TAKES 300 CHILDREN TO BEACH

Three hundred boys and girls of the South Boston district were today the guests of Senator James F. Powers on a street car excursion to Revere Beach. BLUNT HELD FOR POLICEMAN'S DEATH

In the Malden court today William Blunt of No. 411 Salem street, Medford, was held in $2,000 on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Patrolman John W. Powers in Medford yesterday. Blunt, who was driving an automobile, ran into Powers, knocking him from a motorcycle and inflicting injuries from which the policeman died last night.

WOMAN DIES OF KNIFE WOUNDS; HUSBAND HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

Mrs. John W. Wallace of No. 10 Marsfield place, Charlestown, the mother of five children, who was stabbed with a carving knife by her husband yesterday, died at 5.20 a. m. today at the Relief Hospital. The charge of assault with intent to kill, preferred against her husband when arrested, was changed to first degree murder. Wallace was held without bail for trial.

Mrs. Wallace's oldest child, a boy of fourteen, found her lying on the kitchen floor with the knife in her left side. The boy ran for a doctor and neighbors got the police.

The murder is the outcome of an alleged series of quarrels between Wallace and his wife. It is said Mrs. Wallace was compelled to get along most of the time on the scant earnings of her fourteen-year-old son. Four of the children are by her first husband.

The couple had an argument Wednesday night and the quarrel was renewed at dinner time yesterday. Wallace demanded his dinner, but his wife told him she had only enough food for her boy who was working. Wallace became infuriated with his wife, seizing the knife from the table and, it is alleged, plunged it into her side.

The police claim the plates were stolen by Fitzpatrick and taken to his home where the dealers called for them at night.

FRICK'S FEAST LIKE LUCULLUS'

folk didn't respond to the liking of Frick. The steel millionaire found out that only half of his invitations had been answered. There were some regrets and some people that didn't deign to answer. So the multimillionaire curtailed his plans, chiefly to the extent of eliminating the Fairyland dance floor which he proposed to have laid over the beautiful lawn.

Will Have Sousa's Band.

North Shore society leaders opposed to Frick, and who wouldn't think of accepting an invitation to attend anything given by the Fricks, declare that the changes in the Frick plans are due to the publicity given the billion dollar event. The failure of guests to respond promptly and properly, and most of all to the official snub given the Pittsburgher by President Taft in an official statement from the White House.

And yet the billion dollar lawn fest is going to be something to make conservative society people sit up and take notice. John Philip Sousa's band has been brought to Pride's Crossing. The band gets a handsome sum for playing this afternoon from 4 to 7, in the preliminaries for the big lawn party tonight. Inside the mansion a splendid organ program will be played on Frick's $100,000 organ by Frick's organist, Archer Gibson.

The fete will take place in the recently-built "Sunken Gardens," nearer the seashore than the lawn on which it was planned to erect the overnight dance floor. These gardens were today banked about with flowers and with its columns, pillars and big trees and stone boulders, the spot took on the appearance of a real Fairyland.

There will be dancing—not on the lawn, but inside the mansion and on the broad piazza that overlooks the ocean. Afterward comes the banquet, which is going to cost a princely fortune in itself. The arrangements have been so made that anywhere from 350 to 1,000 guests will be able to sit at table. It was reported the cost per plate would be $50.

The first news of the change in the plans for the big function came when J. P. Wilson, a well-known Nahant contractor, received a letter from Mr. Frick, asking him to cancel the contract for a smooth and perfect dancing floor to be laid over the entire Frick lawn tonight.

President Taft's name was among those supposed to be present tonight, until, in a special statement at the White House, the President said he had never intended to attend the Frick party. Which, in a way, is a solar plexus blow, according to the thinking of some of the society leaders. They said it was the first time in history a President had issued a formal statement in order to rebuke anybody as prominent as Mr. Frick.

Frick a Weather Prophet.

Millionaire Frick had even more to say in the letter to Contractor Wilson. He predicts a downpour of rain tonight—between 11 o'clock and 11.15, to be exact. Nobody ever suspected the steel magnate was a great weather prophet, but he made this promise of rain in his letter, just the same. It caused Judge Wilson—the contractor is also a judge of the Nahant court—to remark that he was "glad to know it was going to rain because he would be sure to be in the house at that time."

Mr. Frick also wrote that the dancing would take place inside his mansion, where the handsome gowns of the guests would not be ruined by the rain. He regretted the lack of the dance floor, but thought it would be best to have the dances inside the house.

The collapse in the original lavish plans won't take all the ginger—they call it "social" in society—out of the 14th fete to night.

Expense was no object in any of the preparations. Nothing in the "Arabian Nights" was to be more elaborate than the details of the fete. But publicity stepped in, and as a result, Mr. Frick's wonderful list of guests collapsed.

Because of this, the lawn festival tonight marks the outbreak of a social war fare that has been smoldering on the North Shore for a long time. For many and varied reasons, the Western millionaires never seemed to get along with the old New England families of wealth along the North Shore. So in time the Pittsburghers, and others from the West, got to beholding together.

Attempts of the Fricks and others to break down the barriers were futile. This led to bitterness of feeling, and the bitterness of feeling has led to a building of spite fences where the estate of a Western millionaire adjoins the property of a member of a first family of Massachusetts.

HELEN KELLER TALKS 3 TONGUES

Miss Helen Keller, the marvellously gifted blind, deaf and dumb young woman, was the chief attraction today at the afternoon session of the ninth Otological Congress in the medical department of the Harvard Medical School.

She gave a short address in English, which was followed by one in French at the request of Dr. E. J. Moure of Bordeaux, France. She then spoke in German, which was very pleasing to the German members.

Miss Keller, accompanied by Mrs. B. J. Macy, was the centre of interest just before the delegates assembled in the Amphitheatre, where she gave an exhibition of her skill in articulation. The report that she would sing was not true and was denied by Dr. Henry O. Reik of Baltimore, secretary of the Congress.

The presence of Miss Keller at this congress means much to the ear specialists of the world. Dr. Goldstein of St. Louis set forth certain principles in a paper he read, using Miss Keller as an illustration of his points. He gave the newer devices to be used upon those who are born deaf.

The foreign members of the congress were much impressed with the way that Miss Keller had mastered her difficulties in speech, and pronounced this session of the congress one of the most profitable of the meetings.

Miss Keller has been under instruction for more than a year with Professor White of the Boston Conservatory of Music. She has made such progress that she will before this Fall and will begin in September in Schenectady, where she has been appointed on the Public Service Commission of that city by Mayor Lunn.

This makes the second time that Miss Keller has spoken in public, her last effort being made in Providence.

Nat Goodwin Injured; Risked Life for Woman

Comedian and Actress, Said to Be Marjorie Moreland, in Search for Beach Resort Site.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 16. Nat Goodwin was resting comfortably today, but the injuries received yesterday when he was crushed by a rowboat when cast ashore may necessitate an operation.

Nat C. Goodwin's aged father and mother, who live on St. Botolph street, and his Boston friends, are today anxiously awaiting reports from St. Catherine's Hospital in Santa Monica, Cal., where he lies internally injured and badly bruised and cut after being thrown by the surf from a skiff on the rocks off Rocky Point, about twenty miles north of Santa Monica, as a result of attempting a foolhardy feat.

Goodwin, born in Boston and having made his first success on the stage here, has many friends in the city. His four marriages—to Elizabeth Wetherspy, Nelly Baker Pease, Maxine Elliott and Edna Goodrich—have also kept him in the limelight.

Goodwin and a woman chartered a launch from Captain Hyder of Santa Monica, Goodwin saying that he wanted to locate a place for a new beach resort, today's dispatches say. Marjorie Moreland, an actress who has been in Goodwin's company for several years and who is believed by many to be Mr. Goodwin's fifth wife, was said to be the woman.

When the launch reached the coast off Rocky Point, Miss Moreland—if she was the woman—pointed to a high cliff and said: "There's an Indian lives in a hut on that cliff and I want to send a note to him."

She scribbled a note on the margin of a piece of newspaper and said she would accompany Goodwin ashore. Captain Hyder declared it was foolhardy to put out in a boat in such a sea. Goodwin insisted on going.

Hyder would not let the girl accompany him, said, alone, Goodwin got into the launch's skiff. With an oar, which he used as a paddle, he endeavored to make a landing through the surf, which was running unusually high.

In an instant Goodwin's boat was capsized. The force of the breakers not only threw him upon the rocks, but dashed the boat after him, and the little craft struck him a blow that caused the internal injuries.

"I got a line to him and pulled him ashore," said Captain Hyder. Then we turned about and made all speed possible back to St. Catherine's Hospital.

At the hospital the girl gave no name and disappeared as soon as the patient was taken inside.

NAT GOODWIN AND MARJORIE MORELAND.

Miss Moreland, a member of Goodwin's company for several years and who is believed by many to be the comedian's fifth wife, is reported to have accompanied him in the launch on the California coast in quest of a site for a new beach resort. Goodwin entered the launch's skiff to go ashore in a high surf when the skiff was overturned.

READY TO MOVE ON NEW YORK

MANOEUVRE HEADQUARTERS, NEWTOWN, Ct., Aug. 16.—Twenty thousand United States regulars and State militiamen marched over the hills and through the valleys of Connecticut today and took up their positions for the battle tomorrow that will determine the fate of New York city. There were some skirmishing between small bodies of the Blue defenders and their enemy, the invading Reds, but no general engagement was brought on.

This will start at dawn tomorrow and bring into play the artillery, cavalry and infantry together for the first time since the manoeuvres began. The State troops were glad to get a day's rest from the fighting that had marked the manoeuvres until today. Many militiamen are exhausted and a report reached here from the Blue army headquarters that two New Jersey guardsmen died today as a result of the extreme heat.

Hundreds have been prostrated and at least 200 are in such condition that they may have to be transferred from point to point in baggage wagons. A large number have deserted. Brigadier-General Albert L. Mills, commander of the Blues, unhampered by orders from General Tasker Bliss, chief umpire, took the initiative today and formed a new line of battle along the Mill river, ten miles west of the Housatonic, with a second line of reserves along the Aspetuck five miles further west.

Governor Foss of Massachusetts is with the Massachusetts troops in the Red Army.

King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, according to this story, is insured for $2,500,000. King Edward VII. of England for the last two years of his life was insured for $450,000.

End of Our Final Clean-Up Sale Is Near

Because we're now doubling the size of this great store, we might be called traitors to precedent in not holding an "Alteration" or "Expansion" Sale, or one of the other 57 varieties of sales to be found in the dictionary. It probably ranks as the greatest sale—under any name—ever held in New England, and the stock of 7000 to 8000 Suits on hand July 5 has dwindled nearly to the vanishing point.

One Clothing Sale You Can Bank On

There's no end of Clothing Sales these days—many Half Price Sales in the newspapers, too, with printed reductions just as big, and in some cases bigger, than mine. But I still claim, in the face of all of them, that I am offering the greatest clothes values in Boston today. I know that's a bald statement, but I stand willing, yes anxious, to prove my assertion to the letter. You must investigate, of course. But even a little consideration of the fact that I sell only GEORGES Custom Built Model Clothes, a year in advance of ready-mades in style, must convince you that I have some foundation for my claim.

I have held nothing out of this important sacrifice. Every two and three-pce Suit in the store, every lightweight Overcoat, is relentlessly cut in price, as follows:

JOB-HUNTER CUTS DOWN DAY'S EXPENSES TO $0.77

By BENJAMIN JONES.

THIRD DAY.

Here we are again. I have a fond habit of leaving you after breakfast. I really do not know why I should select that meal to leave a half million readers, and particularly when that half million readers are so interested in my story. But making tale short, here I am. I left you yesterday at Gridley's. I shall never leave you at that restaurant again. They treated me splendidly, and I haven't a word of complaint to find.

My real kick is against the AMERICAN. The circulation is so big. Let me state right here that any young man coming to this city from the country in quest of employment needs keep away from the AMERICAN of fice. The editor DISCHARGES everyone. I have had real trouble as a result of that. It seems as though everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

If you do not care to read more of this story I will tell you now that I have got the high cost of living beaten four ways. In the past twenty-four hours I have eaten all the food I desired, have slept in that little room which I have described in previous stories, and smoked two cigars. My expense for the entire day has been 77 cents.

I also secured employment. Had I been a stranger there is no doubt but what I would have secured at least three positions. The AMERICAN has such a big circulation that people recognize me. I mean they didn't take me for myself.

During my three travel I was thoroughly convinced that a young man coming to Boston or any other big city must have some training. I mean he must have some trade or vocation.

At breakfast I was the butt of ridicule. A little bit of a chap who sat at my right said: "Well, here's that guy again eating his eight-cent breakfast."

I left and went to Parnell's Employment Bureau at No. 3 Tremont Row. It is one flight up from the street. A very pretty girl met me at the counter. She was not over twenty. I told her I was looking for a waiter's job.

She said that there was a place, and I thought that I was going to get a job. Then she looked at me again and said, "You are not a Jew. This man wants a Jewish waiter. I have nothing for you today."

Time for Lunch.

I was not discouraged, and started out again, but realized that it was getting late. It was lunch hour. In Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont they call it dinner hour. It doesn't make any difference what they call it. I was hungry.

I turned down Hanover street and at Washington street went into Jyane's drug store and bought a cigar. I asked the young fellow at the cigar counter where I could get a good dinner. He directed me to the New England House.

The fellow at my right was attired in a market man's rig. He must have eaten $8 worth of food. His check was only thirty cents. I am sure the house lost money on him. I ordered a corn chowder. A corn chowder is a New England dish, and in my youth I thought my mother was the only person in the world who could make a corn chowder worth eating. Believe me, that New England House corn chowder was something great.

My inner man cried for, I again sought a job. I had read in the AMERICAN about the Mercantile Reference and Bond Association on Washington street.

I went there and was treated fine. The man at the desk said I looked good enough to fill a decent job. "Can you give any references?" he asked. I said that that was easy. Then he filled out two cards, one was addressed to the head man at Gilchrist's department store. The position that I was to get was that of cash starter. He also gave me a second card addressed to Hallpain's store on Winter street.

Don't Smoke Hunting a Job.

I am sure that either one of these positions I could have secured. It is needless for me to say that I did not apply for either one.

I again bought a cigar, but this proved my undoing. If a man is really looking for work don't smoke a cigar. I met a fellow on a brewery wagon and asked him if he knew where I could get a job. He sent me down to Berry's bottling place on Leverett street. I walked down and asked for the manager. The manager was away on a vacation, but the assistant manager was there. He was very busy reading a bunch of bills and letters. When I reached him and asked for a job, he said: "You look very prosperous. I think you are a better writer than a teamster."

He was on to me, but I got some information from him. He said that if they needed a man he would not hesitate about giving me a job. He also said that he would start a man at $12 a week and not ask questions.

From there I went to Boardtige Brothers' restaurant in Scollay square. I was in there about thirty seconds. The boss said he didn't need a waiter. I went out and walked down to Young's Hotel. Three or four newspaper friends of mine saw me and asked me how I was getting along. They saw me looking at the City Directory, but let me alone.

Supper for Ten Cents.

I looked over the list of employment bureaus. I was, in fact, becoming more systematic in my quest for work. I copied several names. The first one was the Pitt Employment Agency at No. 172 Washington street. As I entered a boy asked me what I wanted. "I am a waiter and want a job," I answered. He called another fellow who gave me a blank to fill out. As he gave it to me he said, "If you can make good this will be a good job. It pays $9 a week."

Then he filled out another blank and told me to go to No. 222 Hanover street. That is a coffee house place. I did not want the job so did not go down. It was six o'clock. I had walked about eighteen miles and was hungry. The kiddies at Gridley's had chided me so much that I hunted up a new place for supper. I found the Daisy Lunch on Howard street. Mayor Fitzgerald has advised folks to eat beans and boycott meat. It is a good idea. I ordered beans, coffee and pie. The place was crowded with men and every walk of life must have been represented. The check was ten cents. I enjoyed my supper. I picked up an AMERICAN and went to my room. My night's rest was very good. So good, in fact, that I was up at 6:30. The Daisy Lunch looked so good, I decided to eat breakfast there. I had an egg sandwich, coffee and coffee rolls. The check was twelve cents.

I have had a very interesting day and have gained much experience. My expense Bruized to:

Lunch	.15
Supper	.30
Breakfast	.12
Room	.28
Cigars	.12
Total	.77

After three days of this living I am feeling fine. I have become convinced that Boston, even to a stranger, is one grand old town. Reporting, that I have confined my efforts to persons whom I did not know. They have treated me in such a manner that I am proud of my city. Boston is one dear old city. If a man knocks Boston he would knock any place in the world.

PENROSE FACES IMPEACHMENT

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 16.—The Pittsburgh Leader, the official mouthpiece of Senator William Flinn and the local organ of the Washington (Roosevelt) party, published the following.

Boies Penrose, senior United States Senator from Pennsylvania, will have to face impeachment proceedings.

He knows this and that is why he is fighting so desperately to elect Assemblymen and State Senators who will obey him and help to keep the scandal suppressed.

The charge upon which his colleagues in the Senate will try him will be that of having accepted money from a corporation to influence his action as a public official.

The items alleged to have been written by John D. Archbold, financial agent of the Standard Oil Trust, to Penrose will be the basis of the impeachment charges.

These letters will be presented to the State Assembly when it meets in January, for investigation, and, if not contradicted, the Legislature will be asked to transmit the facts to the National Congress with impeachment proceedings to follow.

One of the letters referred to is one of a series published in the current issue of Hearst's Magazine, all written to Penrose by John D. Archbold.

And Blackheads. On Both Sides of Nose. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, Blackheads Gone, Pimples Dried Up and Disappeared.

85 Kendall St., Boston, Mass.—"My face was full of blackheads and red pimples which itched. They were on both sides of my nose. My nose was all sore and a regular scab came on it because I was always trying to do something for it, as when I went out everyone would say, 'Look at your nose. Why don't you do something for it?' I used cold cream and then someone told me to tan ——, but nothing did me any good until a lady told me to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I used the Cuticura Ointment at night, and when I got up in the morning I washed my face with Cuticura Soap and hot water, as hot as I could bear it. It was only three days when you could see a great improvement in my face. My blackheads are all gone, and my face is fine. The pimples just seemed to dry up and have all disappeared.

I had some kind of a rash come out on my arms and all I did was to apply Cuticura Ointment at night and in the morning and it disappeared in about a week." (Signed) Miss Mary E. Ferguson, Dec. 20, 1911.

Rex Beach, the Famous Author, Playwright and Sportsman, Praises Tuxedo Tobacco

REX BEACH
Famous Author, Playwright and Sportsman

"Tuxedo Is the Only Tobacco I Can Smoke With Entire Comfort," Says Mr. Beach.

"Certainly, I smoke Tuxedo," said Rex Beach to the first question put to him by the Tuxedo interviewer. Mr. Beach was tinkering with the engine of his 60 h. p. motor boat as it lay at the dock at Mañana, the novelist's beautiful summer home on Lake Hopatcong, New Jersey, a husky, man-size calabash and a green tin of Tuxedo on a seat near the engine were silent witnesses to the smoke habits of the author of "The Ne'er-Do-Well", "The Spoilers", "The Barrier", "The Silver Hordes", "Going Some", and a hundred short stories which have gripped American men and women by their vividness, fascination and humor.

"I became acquainted with Tuxedo the last time I went after bears up in Alaska," said the novelist. "Mrs. Beach wanted me to get a few bear skin rugs to match the blue draperies of a morning room. Blue bears are about as plentiful as icicles on the Hotel Knickerbocker roof in August, and Joe, my guide, and I nearly wore out several pair of perfectly good legs and arms climbing the Alaskan Mountains and lugging our young cannons in and out of canyons that made even the mountain goats nervous.

"Nights we were good and tired. And I wanted to smoke a pipe, but I could not, because I had never found a tobacco that would not burn my mouth until it felt like it was blistered.

"Joe Ibach, my guide, smoked constantly. Perhaps his pipe went out while he was asleep, but certain sure he kept it going steadily while he was awake.

"I have smoked Tuxedo in sub-Arctic Alaska, at Panama and everywhere—wouldn't smoke another kind."
Rex Beach.

One evening I was particularly peevish about it, and he said:

"'Why don't you smoke Tuxedo? Everybody smokes it up here.' It don't burn or bite. I use it all the time, especially when I am climbing, and it seems to help my throat.'

"That was all. I tried Tuxedo, and I've stayed with it since. I've smoked in sub-Arctic Alaska. I've smoked it at Panama. I smoke it everywhere. It is the only tobacco I can smoke with entire comfort."

Tuxedo
TOBACCO

Tuxedo has made pipe smoking possible to thousands of men—because Tuxedo is the ONLY tobacco that never bites, nor irritates the mouth, nose or throat. Hundreds of well known physicians, orators, actors, lawyers, singers, lecturers, ministers and other public speakers testify that Tuxedo not only gives them the keenest pleasure but exercises a good influence on the throat.

Tuxedo has many imitators. None of them has yet discovered the "Tuxedo process." Tuxedo remains unique, unrivaled.

WILSON MAY AID MAINE CONTEST

SEAGIRT, N. J., Aug. 16.—Maine political leaders, it was learned today, are urging Governor Woodrow Wilson to make a few speeches in their state before the gubernatorial election. A week ago there was said to be little chance that the Governor would campaign in Maine before the gubernatorial election there on September 9, but today some prospect was held out that he might, as the requests from Maine are many.

Colonel Roosevelt's threat to "smoke out" Governor Wilson got a prompt reply from the Governor today. Governor Wilson's attention was called to Roosevelt's statement that he proposed to pin the Governor to an explicit recital of his objections to the Bull Moose platform.

"It has always been found to be a very easy job to do that," said the Governor with a laugh.

Governor Wilson says that he will take a Sunday off and go through the Roosevelt document. It may then be expected he will give the Colonel what he calls for.

The Governor has accepted an invitation to review the Spanish War Veterans at their national encampment at Atlantic City on September 10. President Taft and Colonel Roosevelt will also review the veterans, but on separate days. The encampment runs from September 7 to 14th.

Says the Office Boy.

By MORTON BIRGE

Say, this job I got's a bird,
English langwidge, far's I've heard,
Seems ter be most all one word—
"BOY!"

Who draws ev'rybody's kicks,
Who's the guy wot gets the bricks,
Whose yung feelin's is for nix?
"BOY!"

Editters they—come an' go,
Some is fast and some is slow,
One loud, yellin' word they know—
"BOY!"

Bet when Gabr'l hits this dump,
'Stid er blowin' off his trump,
He'll sing out—or I'm er chump—
"BOY!"

'I'LL COME BACK,' SAID MISS LOVE

Evidence that Margaret Love, the actress who figured in the veiled woman "shooting" incident at the office of Manager Thomas Nickerson of the Haverhill Gas Light Company, carried, besides a revolver, a pocket flash light has been discovered by the Haverhill police. They see in this a determination on the part of the actress to have gone on to Nickerson's home in Haverhill later in the evening had she failed to locate him at his office.

Another new light on the case came today when it was learned that when Miss Love was at last prevailed upon to leave Nickerson's office Tuesday she turned at the door and said to George M. G. Nichols, former city solicitor, and Nickerson's next friend, "Yes, I will go now, but I will return. I will go now."

The police denied a request for a warrant for Miss Love's arrest on a charge of assault with intent to kill, will assemble new evidence and bring charges of carrying a dangerous weapon. The police are busy on several new clews today, and will not give up the search on account of their tieup by Horace M. Sargent, clerk of the district court at Haverhill.

The possibility that Miss Love is still in Haverhill is being considered by the police. A man closely connected with the case said to them:

I know that Miss Love is in Haverhill. Nickerson knows it, too, and if he wished he could tell where she is. For reasons best known to herself I cannot tell and Nickerson does not care to reveal her hiding place. This lack of her being in Boston is absurd.

REAL ADVENTURES OF MARY GREEN IN BOSTON

Did you ever consider a problem like this?

Mary Green, a young girl, from, let us say, New Hampshire, comes to Boston. She is a stranger in a strange city, friendless and homeless.

What does Boston offer such a girl as Mary Green?

There are instances similar to this of daily occurrence. Does Boston tell them where they can find a good, decent, safe lodging place? Does Boston do its full duty by the thousands of Mary Greens who come to Boston?

And how about the high cost of living? How does it affect Mary Green's purse while she is hunting for a job?

And does Boston tell Mary Green where she can find a job? Does Boston do its full duty by Miss Green and other girls like her?

These and other interesting questions of a big problem will be answered in a series of articles beginning in Monday's AMERICAN. Be sure to read the "Adventures of Mary Green" starting in the AMERICAN next Monday.

AMERICAN ARTIST MISSING IN ENGLAND

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Mrs. L. B. Sheldon, an American artist, is reported missing. She went to the English Lake District for a holiday and has not been heard of since August 2.

PISTOL BATTLE WITH BURGLAR

NEWBURYPORT, Aug. 16.—The burglar who has terrorized this section for the past ten days tried to break into the cashier at Salisbury Town square early today, exchanged revolver shots with Night Watchman Augustus Locke, then escaped in an automobile which was waiting for him. Neither revolver shot took effect, so far as known. This makes the burglar's fourteenth visit in ten days.

Night Watchman Locke heard a noise outside the barn at 2:30 a. m. He saw a man trying to push up one of the windows. Locke called to the man, who ran. Locke drew his revolver and fired one shot. There was a flash of flame in the shadow and a report. The burglar had fired back. The burglar shot on the run and kept on toward the highway which runs from Salisbury Beach to Amesbury.

ROOSEVELT OFF FOR PROVIDENCE

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Colonel Roosevelt motored into New York from Oyster Bay today to start for Providence, where he makes his opening campaign speech tonight. Before leaving the ex-President remarked that he felt it to "give them a fight."

"We are in this campaign for the people," he said. "The bosses are on the other side."

The Colonel will amplify his views on the tariff in tonight's speech, lambasting the Democratic and Republican platforms.

SUFFOLK JURY SUSPENDS.

The Suffolk Grand Jury in special session was extended by Judge Dunn today. It had been investigating charges of election and perjury against Boston Elevated officials in connection with the Elevated strike. The jury did not report. Sessions will be resumed August 26.

Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. Fish Order Tons of Food for Fetes

NEWPORT, Aug. 16.—More than five hundred invitations have been sent out by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish for their entertainments, to be given here next week. There is no rivalry as each will attend the other's party.

Everybody is in a riot of cards, and requests from those absent from Newport are coming thick and fast, even by cable from Europe from those returning next week.

Count Helle De Talleyrand of France, who is the guest of Mrs. William R. Leeds, will attend Mrs. Fish's ball, making his first public appearance. Thus Mrs. Fish has captured the social lion of Newport.

Mrs. Vanderbilt will give theatricals a costume dance and two suppers. The quadrille in oriental costume opens the costume ball at Beaulieu, August 23. Tons of provisions are being taken to Mrs. Vanderbilt's and Mrs. Fish's, where their chief chefs have been augmented by many others with assistants. The special brands of wines from the Vanderbilt and Fish cellars here and at Garrison have been received. These will be iced twenty-four hours before their use.

SIDE WHISKERS, IS LONDON'S LATEST

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The latest fashion for English dandies is side whiskers. According to the Daily Mail it is part of the craze for the costumes of 1820. Max Beerbohm set this going, the fancy dress balls of the recent season helped it along, and now it is not uncommon to see young men looking like the portraits of their grandfathers.

At Marie Lohr's wedding this fashion was especially remarked.

Because of This Fact: The sale is progressive. That is to say one lot of bargains succeeds another in a steady procession of increasing values. For instance: one lot of goods grows smaller or sells out altogether in a given department; the buyer doesn't want the interest to flag, so he immediately adds goods of a higher value to sell at an equally low price or he makes a brand new Red Tag reduction on some other goods to take its place. This serves to keep the interest up to the highest pitch at all times—because there is always something new on sale at some new low price.

Red Tags Work This Way: Whatever we wish to clear out at once, we put a Red Tag on it. The original white price ticket remains on the article—the Red Tag shows the reduced price it is to be sold at. In this way you see how deep the price is cut—and figure out for your own self exactly how much you save.

RED SOX RILEY'S COLUMN PILGRIMS

NEW YORK city is stupefied today over the possibility of the Cubs winning the National League pennant from the Giants. In New York sportdom you're always a sure winner—somehow. You can't lose. If you're in "the system" and you're hard pressed, murder, if necessary, will pull you out. The end justifies the means. Anyway, the sports expect to win. They always claim something mysterious on the other fellow. "Inside business" dyes it. They say gambling can't be suppressed. When somebody tries, a few bullets "placed where they will do the most good" are supposed to stop it. If the Giants lose, a bit of umpiring and a few hints from anvove are supposed to help them along. This is the New York "dope." They are always cock-sure that they'll pull out somehow.

* * *

WELL, New York and its Giants, who have tried to make a second rate major league of the famous old National by corralling the pick of the players, attempting a strangle-hold on the league headquarters, and using the whole world for publicity, had that pennant won a month ago. Now come the Cubs and, by slow grinding day by day, and under the most adverse circumstances, these same Cubs have reduced the Giants' lead to five paltry games. Yesterday's pastime in Chicago, when the crippled Cubs drove Marquard off the mound and won by a score of 5 to 1, pulled down the Giants' lead. Still, in New York they can't see anything but the Giants in the race.

* * *

IN Boston the Giants have not been seen since last June, when they were supposed to have the National League pennant in hand, and packed away. Some very good New York umpiring helped along the job here. Then came the Cubs, last week, and notwithstanding umpiring that savored of an anti-Cubs flavor, baseball playing by the Pilgrims which was perilously close to the "laying down" point, gave Chicago four games. With a tail-end team and a bald and raw sample of how the great national game should not be conducted, Boston grew rather tired of the National League contest.

* * *

UNTIL the last game of the Cubs-Pilgrims series, Boston was given an exhibition of unsatisfactory baseball. In the last game, the Cubs played something like the real article, on the showing made in the last game, the Cubs would be entitled to about three days in the American League. On the showing made in the previous three games, they would rank farther downward. Baseball writers who have followed their fortunes say that they do pound better elsewhere. All that Boston "fans" can do is to predict that, playing as all of them have played in Boston, the Red Sox would beat the Cubs or the Giants hands down in four straight games of a world's series.

* * *

STILL, baseball is the most fascinating and uncertain sport there is and those same Giants and same Cubs might do very much better. They still have—for they have any notion of flying the world's champion flag on their poles.

* * *

THE Red Sox trimmed the Browns roundly, 11 to 6, yesterday in a game in which the Sox took no chances and they did not have to work after Pitcher Dowd fell for seven runs in the second inning. Tris Speaker set two drives pass him that counted home runs, but would never have counted had the batting of base hits in any close encounter. In each case, "Spoke" let the ball bound past him, and, again, a two-bagger was registered on a short fly of the variety that Speaker usually gets under all of his work. He showed how good Speaker really is, rather than marking a demerit against him. In one of the three home runs of this week he charged to Speaker and in all fares cases any other centrefielder would doubtless have suffered as Speaker did. When the ball passes the centrefielder at Fenway Park, it's usually a triple or a four-bagger. "Let the game be close and they don't pass Speaker."

* * *

FRANK SCHULTE labors under the same handicap in the National League. When the Cubs play the Pilgrims he does not have to go to the trouble of hitting home runs. So he doesn't. Then somebody suggests that "Schulte is falling off."

* * *

BELATED "dope" that George T. Stallings of the Boston club probably manage the Pilgrims next year is still coming into Boston newspaper offices. Garry Herrmann Gaffney has had the possibility of hiring Stallings stored away in his mind since last Winter, as stated in the Boston AMERICAN off and on since then, but the possibility is no nearer a reality today than it ever was. If Gaffney decides to retire King, Stallings is more likely to have the job than any other man in it. If King should take charge of the Kansas City team, in which case he would be able to manage his billiard parlor at the same time, there would be no trouble about arranging the matter. There would be no need of waivers. King would quit any time he cared to and assume charge of the Kansas City team without asking any odds of the baseball authorities, provided Gaffney was willing to cancel his contract.

* * *

JAKE STAHL decided to take a day off yesterday and let Clyde Engle work at first base. Engle hit the ball for a triple, a double and two singles in five times at bat, besides playing a clean first-base and running the bases like a greyhound. Engle is the "fastest fat man" in the business. Engle is very fat. In fact, He's "stocky," and grows "stockier" every day. Because of his build they call him Hackenschmidt in the Red Sox camp, but he's the hardest, toughest, fastest "fat" man you ever saw. And because he can play every position on the team—except pitcher—with equal success, he's one of the most valuable employes of Jimmy McAleer's pay-roll.

* * *

WITH hundreds of requests for world's series reservations already in hand, the Red Sox management have begun to figure on how to accommodate the "fans" next October. By crowding, the present stands will seat about 25,000. Plans have been drawn for a new stand along the left field foul line which will seat about 3,700. Another temporary stand will be built between the centrefield "bleachers" and the first-base fifty-cent stand—provided the Sox win the pennant—which should accommodate 6,000 more. Temporary seats may be built along "Duffy's Cliff," the left field bank which is named after Duffy Lewis—to provide for fully 3,000 or more. Thus about 38,000 may be squeezed into seats at Fenway Park, if world's series games are played there. In such a case standees may be admitted in numbers that would increase the crowds to more than 40,000. It is possible that space may be provided for 45,000.

PILGRIMS MEET RAJAHS AGAIN

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 16—The Boston Pilgrims will try to show some life today, as Manager Kling gave them a little talkfest after yesterday's encounter.

Wildness by the Boston pitchers allowed the Cardinals to walk off with the opening game of the series. Manager Kling used Tyler, Dickson and Krob on the mound, this trio allowing seven hits and beating the same number of passes.

The contest unearthed one reliable flinger, Floyd Krob, lately of the Cubs and Louisville. When both Tyler and Dickson failed, Krob ascended the hill in the sixth and escaped without scoring in the last three innings.

Kling got into the game in the last round, batting for pitcher Krob, but immediately fouled to the plate. Gowdy was also sent in to bat for Archer in an effort to start something, but he also failed to make good.

Ed McDonald is in danger of suspension, having run afoul of Umpire Klem. In the seventh he objected to a strike at which he did not swing. Much language was spilled in the vicinity of the plate until Klem's patience was exhausted, and he commanded McDonald to depart. Edward was rather slothful in his movements, so Klem pulled his watch and threatened to forfeit the game. Then Mac moved faster.

Diamond Gossip

Manager McGraw is not worrying about his clubmates. His closest friends say that he is showing more faith in the Giants than any manager is not surprised at the slump of the pilgrims and only says that the terrific strain is the cause. The one thing he is looking for a close race with his team on the top when the bell sounds at the end of the season.

* * *

If the big deal, said to be on between Cincinnati team and the St. Louis Cardinals, is consummated, several players will return to the teams with which they started their careers in the major leagues. Konetchy, Onslow, Huggins of St. Louis and Hollitzel, Egan, Keefe, Marsans and Herzog of Cincinnati. The invasion of Huggins and Oakes were with the Reds some years ago, and Hollitzel was for a while with the Cardinals until the national commission turned him over to Reds.

* * *

If an umpire owes you money, keep it quiet. It does not pay to ask an umpire for the coin, at least in the New York State League. Artie Latham, formerly with the Giants, was recently appointed an umpire in the New York State League. Beholder Natteus of Syracuse was waiting for his turn at bat in the game which Latham made his debut. One player made a remark about loaning $1? to a man named Latham about ten years ago, and having never received it. He was talking aloud, and Latham did not like the remark.

"Cut that out or I will fine you $10," said the umpire.

"Put me the twelve that you have been owing me for the past ten years and I will pay the fine on the spot," replied Natteus.

"Off the field with you," said the umpire.

"That's what you get in fair league," said the player, "do not get your money back and get fined and thrown out of the game."

* * *

"Do you know why Hans Wagner is playing better than ever this year?" asked Mike Donlin the other day. "The answer is easy. The big Dutchman's hands are growing bigger and his arms are getting longer all the time. Besides, the ball looks twice as large to him when it sails over the plate. Hans may have wrinkles and gray hair, but he's half the Pittsburg team just the same."

* * *

Cincinnati scribes are calling attention to the fact that Eddie Grant, who is starring at third for the Reds, could make more money practicing law than he can as a ball player. Harvard graduate, however, loves the game so well he is willing to sacrifice income for baseball, knowing he can make up for it later in life. Grant is playing a better game at third for the Reds than Frank Phelan did earlier in the season.

If the Athletics lose thirteen games between now and October 6, the Red Sox have won the American League pennant, even if they only "mark time" from now on, winning one day and losing the next.

Connie Mack must win thirty-three of his remaining forty-five games to duplicate his triumph of 1911—assuming that the Boston Red Sox play even with all their competitors, winning half and losing half of their games.

The Red Sox won yesterday, 13 to 6, while the Athletics beat Cleveland, 5 to 2. Before these two games were played it was figured that the Red Sox could now more than one-half of their remaining games and beat the Athletics in the race if the Athletics won more than two-thirds of THEIR remaining games.

The Athletics' task has changed a bit today, in consequence. Edward was rather slothful in his movements, so Klem pulled his watch and threatened to forfeit the game. Then Mac moved faster.

Every day that the Red Sox and Athletics' results are ALIKE, the Sox gain.

The Red Sox still have forty-four games to play, while the Athletics have forty-five.

If the Red Sox win only half of these games and the Athletics lose THREE OF FOUR—instead of the two in three already figured in the figuring, the final result would be:

	Won.	Lost.	P.C.
Athletics	99	63	.611
Red Sox	98	56	.636

That reckoning allows the Athletics to lose twelve games while they win thirty-three, and gives the Red Sox only twenty-two of the forty-four games they have left.

Perhaps the Athletics can win THREE IN FOUR. But they will find that the Red Sox will SURELY WIN MANY MORE THAN HALF OF THEIR GAMES.

This allows for a slump in the Red Sox playing very much greater than any slump they have had this year. It allows, in fact, for a slump almost as bad as any they had in 1911, when they finished fifth. Last year, after the amazing downfall of the last few weeks in the pennant race the Red Sox finished with a margin of more games won than lost, their percentage being close to .510.

Regardless of the kind of baseball the Athletics play, the Red Sox will play at least as successfully. In the last three weeks the Athletics have crept up only one-half a game on the Red Sox, who now lead them by nine and one-half games and .085 points in the percentage column.

The season will run a little less than eight weeks longer.

If the Athletics should continue to gain on the Red Sox as consistently as they have gained since both teams started on their last Western trip, the Red Sox would still beat them at the finish by a margin of eight full games.

Every Day They're Closer to It.

Every day that the two teams play the chances of the Athletics diminish. Every time that the Red Sox win and the Athletics also win, the Sox will have to win less games and the Athletics more if the latter are to capture the pennant.

If both teams continue at their present gait, and if both of them should win the next six games, a week from now the Red Sox would win half of their remaining games to finish with 101 won and 59 lost, while the Athletics would have to win more than three in four of the games they have left to take the lead with 102 victories and 52 defeats.

At that time the Red Sox would have eighty-two victories and thirty-four defeats, while the Athletics would have seventy-two wins and forty-three losses.

Mack Could Lose But Nine.

If, thereafter, the Red Sox should win half of their remaining thirty-eight games, they would finish, as said, with 101 victories, and if the Athletics should win thirty of their remaining thirty-eight games—LOSING ONLY NINE—they would have only 102 victories and win by a margin of one game. That shows what only one week of even playing between the two clubs will do.

Whether the Athletics lose thirteen games from now on is a question that is about as easily answered as "Will the Athletics take the lead in the American League pennant?" Both questions are ANSWERED BY THE SAME SERIES, which was only TWELVE GAMES PLAYED, still to be played on Fenway Park. The Tigers changed places with the Athletics several times, but finally, on September 28, the Athletics made it impossible for the Tigers to beat them.

From now until August 29—two weeks hence—the Red Sox will meet Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago at Fenway Park. Then the Athletics will play St. Louis, Detroit and Chicago at Shibe Park. Since both teams have been playing with more or less equal success for the last three weeks—in fact, since Boston has had better success than the Athletics have had against these teams all season long—it is only fair to presume that the present standing of the Red Sox and Athletics should not be materially changed in the two weeks leading up to August 29.

On that date the Athletics will begin a series with the Red Sox in Boston.

After that the Sox will go over to New York for a series, after which they return home to play four games with the Senators.

Athletics Could Win All.

Washington is the only team which has an "edge" on Boston. The Senators beat us one more game than we beat them. The Red Sox can, at least, hold their own with the Senators today. There can be no doubt of that. At the worst that series should be an even break.

Then all the eastern teams go West for a short trip. Following that trip the Red Sox return East and finish the season with what promises to be a gruelling series, first with Washington and then with the Athletics, with whom they close the season.

Should the Red Sox and Athletics retain their relative standing from now until the end of the season and the Athletics win ALL of the games in the two series yet to be played between the two leaders, the Red Sox will still win the pennant by two and one half full games.

Both have practically the same calibre of play from now on and the Red Sox are playing every bit as successfully as the Athletics.

DUBUC MAKES GOOD.

One of the most successful failures of a pitcher dropping into the minors and then returning to the elite set is that of Jean Dubuc. He has been a big factor in what measure of success the Detroits have gained the year.

Plans Are Completed for Water Carnival

Plans are completed for the water carnival of the East Boston Swimming Club, which is to be held at Wood Island Park Beach next Saturday.

The first event, the boys' 100-yard race, will be called promptly at 2 o'clock. Matt Leary, who is directing the affair, is sure that his method for conducting a water carnival will do away with tiresome waits, and there will be something doing all the time. There are 20 events on the program.

COLLINS OUT TO BEAT RIVALS

The middle-distance championship of America being decided on a point system, it will this year be won by either Carlstrom Carman or George Wiley.

Realizing that he will lose his title owing to having been absent all season, Elmer Collins has made up his mind that his only chance for keeping up his reputation is by properly cleaning up both Carman and Wiley.

With that end in view Collins intends to open his campaign by taking the "boneyard" away from Carman.

According to press reports from Newark, the champion is displaying great speed, and his staying power appears to be on the increase. That he will have to be at his best is unquestioned, for any one of the thousands of spectators who have seen Carman and Wiley speed will have no difficulty in stamping them as the most dangerous pair of pace followers seen here in years.

Jimmy Moran is working like a Trojan, for he has sold out his milk business and has no desire to go to work. James likes the easy life, and rumor has it that only one hour of racing, and he realizes that he must show the speed or be shelved.

Diamond Berths for 'White Hopes'

Baseball Mogul Has Novel Scheme

By BILL BAILEY.

When it comes to originality Tip O'Neill, president of the Western League, has the right to rank with the best.

The minor league president does not spend all of his time reading the baseball news. When he has time to spare he also reads some part of that sporting news which relates to the fighting end of the game. And his heart was touched when he read of the numerous white hopes without employment.

"There should be no such thing as white hopes without a job," said Mr. O'Neill.

"Continue," he was urged. Because it was a certainty that the Western League president had some idea in mind and that it would be interesting.

"I'd give every white hope a chance with a ball team," continued Mr. O'Neill. "The idea being—"

* * *

"The idea being this," continued Mr. O'Neill, "when an umpire makes a bad decision there is an awful roar. If he happens to be umpiring on the losing batter stoops down and grabs a handful of dust and quite casually, and to say nothing of accidentally, tosses it in the umpire's face.

"Then he steps on his feet. If he gets very angry he swings on the umpire. The fans in the stand think that is great stuff and they applaud.

"If the home team loses it is quite natural to lay it all on the umpire. Maybe the fans wait for the umpire and peck him with pop bottles and cushions.

"'Moo, the umpire' is a popular cry. And what has he done? The chances are that he has done nothing. The very worst that he could have done was to make an error and call a home man out when he wasn't or a visiting player safe when he wasn't.

* * *

"Yes, but the white hopes?" it was urged.

"I'm getting to that," continued the Western League president. "My plan is this: I would have one of these white hopes on every team. Any time that a player made an error which cost a ball game it would be the duty of the white hope to step out there and chastise the offending player. Why not?

"If the umpire makes a mistake which costs a ball game the players go after him, all right. Then why shouldn't they go after the player who makes an error at a critical moment and loses a ball game?

"We'll say that the inning is the ninth and that the home team is leading by one run.

"There are visiting players on second and third and a ball to be hit to shortstop. Two men are out. All the shortstop has to do is to pick up the ball and throw the runner out at first. Instead the shortstop throws the ball several feet over the first baseman's head. Two runs come in and the game team is beaten by one run.

* * *

"When the last home batsman has been retired the white hope walks out. He grabs the shortstop and punches him several times. Why not? If the umpire is to be punished for an error why not the home shortstop? If it's the visiting one, why, he will be trounced by the white hope who is traveling with that team. I don't see anything the matter with the scheme.

"If it is such a heinous offence for the umpire to lost a ball game by a bad decision, why isn't is just as bad for your favorite player to do the same? And if it is right to punch the umpire who makes a bad decision—one that costs you the ball game—why shouldn't the player who makes a bad throw or any other kind of an error that costs the game receive the same punishment? Think it over."

Which merely goes to prove that no joke was intended when it was remarked that when it came to originality Mr. O'Neill was entitled to much consideration.

Record Crowd to See Cubs in Second Battle

CHICAGO, Aug. 16.—Preparations were made at the Cubs park today to handle the biggest crowd that has ever thronged the west side ball field. The prospect of a decisive contest between the historic enemies—the Giants and the Cubs was expected by President Murphy and his crew to draw a crowd that would make the fences bulge.

It was announced early in the day that Christy Mathewson would be on the mound for the Giants and Jim Lavender for the Cubs. This added to the interest of the fans.

Not in years has any series here attracted as much attention as the present one. In spite of the interest there was no open betting on the outcome of to-day's game, on the series or on the pennant race.

The Cubs won handily yesterday, but McGraw declared today that the Giants would capture the next two games of the series.

Gotch to Drop Famous Toe-Hold in Big Bout

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 16.—No referee has been selected for the Frank Gotch-Jess Westergaard wrestling match, which will be held here on August 22. Dave Porteous, who had been regarded as the probable third man on the mat, will not officiate, following a protest by the challenger.

"With the toe hold barred," said Westergaard, "I don't propose to have an unfriendly referee keep me away from the title."

Gotch has agreed not to use his fatal toe hold in the coming match, and inasmuch as this is the first championship bout when the Iowa farmer has not tweaked the toes of his opponent, the outcome will be regarded with interest. There are many wrestling fans who believe that Gotch, without his toe hold, is no more dangerous than Samson without his hair.

Red Sox Purchase Star Texas Twirler

The Red Sox have purchased the release of George Foster, a pitcher, from the Houston Club, leader in the Texas League race. He will report at the end of the season.

Secretary McRoy also announces that the club has exercised its options on Harold Jarvis of the Jersey City Club and Leonard of the Denver Club. Both of these players were with the Red Sox in the Spring and they have developed during the season to such an extent that they are now regarded as valuable men.

Foster, the man secured from the Houston Club, is a very promising pitcher in the Texas League, his record up to a week ago being eighteen games won and six lost. Seven of the games won were shutouts, and one of the games lost was a shutout for his own team. He stands 5 feet 8 inches and weighs 170 pounds.

Busy Days for Johnny Kilbane

Promoters Anxious to Sign Champ

By JACK CONWAY.

BOXING promoters throughout the country are making drastic efforts to get Johnny Kilbane, featherweight extraordinary, to agree to display his skill within a twenty-four-foot ring before the Fall. Johnny is now taking things easy at his home in Cleveland and stubbornly asserts that he will not box until the latter part of September at the earliest.

Jimmy Dunn's sturdy little battler has made quite a sum of money since he wrested the featherweight crown from the crafty Abe Attell at Vernon, Cal., on Washington's Birthday, and he can well afford to enjoy life during the hot Summer months.

The ring of the 122-pounders has received tempting offers to fight both on the Coast and in New York. Alex. McLean, matchmaker of the Pilgrim A. A., would also in all probability be only too glad to obtain the services of the doughty youth from the Forest City.

Since Kilbane became champion he has failed to startle the boxing world by his work in the ring. He has engaged in a number of contests, and, although he didn't win all of them with ease, he held his own in easy fashion. Jimmy Walsh of this city gave the champion the toughest argument. The local pride held Dunn's protege on even terms for twelve rounds at the Arena last Spring.

The writer does not believe that Kilbane will experience a great deal of difficulty in disposing of the leading featherweights in the world when he again starts campaigning. He is still young and is very strong. Besides these two qualifications, Kilbane is a wonderful boxer. He is fast, shifty and always cool when in action. True, Johnny is not as great a feather-weight as Abe Attell was in his prime.

But one must not forget that Attell was one of the marvels of the ring—a man whom many considered the equal of the mighty George Dixon. Kilbane is a clever-living boxer and is a credit to the sport which he has chosen for a profession.

THERE is one local heavyweight who has my sympathy. His name is Jeff Madden and he hails from South Boston. Jeff is a fair third-rater, but he has a habit of letting his ambition get the best of his judgment. The big fellow has been matched to clash with Joe Jeanette in a ten-round contest at Madison Square Garden, New York, on next Monday night.

Jeanette should have pretty easy picking. From my way of looking at things the powerful Hoboken black will win by a knockout in about three rounds and if he is feeling in good fettle he may slip across a dream wallop in even less time. The one redeeming feature about the entire affair is that flowers are cheap at this time of the year.

FREDDY DUFFY, the clever Jamaica Plain boxer, will probably meet Packey McFarland at Jack Dougherty's Rhode Island club on Labor Day. George Fallon, Duffy's manager, has virtually completed arrangements for the go. Duffy has done some fine work in the squared circle during the past year, and, while he is not nearly as clever as Packey, he should make the Chicago wizard extend himself if the bout takes place. Freddy is now doing light work at his home at Jamaica Plain.

MR. RAWHIDE KELLEY and his battler, Frank Picaro, arrive in town today. Picaro is in fine shape and declares he will score a win over Matty Baldwin, the Pride of Bunker Hill, when they meet at the Pilgrim A. A. next Tuesday evening.

Picaro met Willie Beecher at New York last Wednesday night and, according to many reports, the Californian did everything but knock out the New Yorker. Beecher is a sturdy youngster and has met many of the best lightweights boxing today.

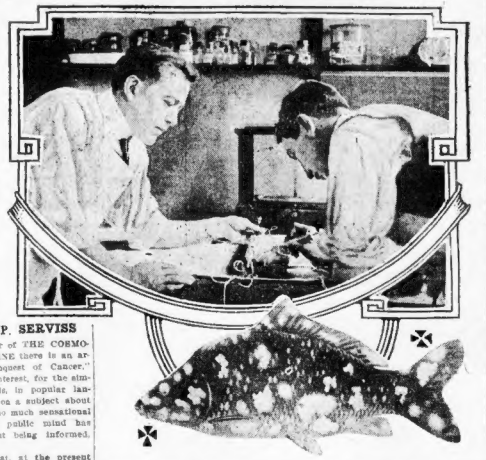
Can Death by Disease Be Eliminatad?

If Doctors Succeed in Finding a Specific for Cancer, the Last of Man's Greatest Maladies Will Have Been Mastered.

In this picture laboratory assistants are shown inoculating a rat with cancer tissue. Both of these pictures are taken and reproduced by permission, from the Cosmopolitan Magazine for August.



Cancerous growths on a carp, a rare case, which shows that even fish are not immune to cancer.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

IN the August number of THE COSMOPOLITAN MAGAZINE there is an article on "The Conquest of Cancer," which is of absorbing interest, for the simple reason that it tells, in popular language, the exact truth on a subject about which there has been so much sensational exaggeration that the public mind has been perturbed, without being informed, upon it.

The sad truth is that, at the present time, the only sure cure for cancer is the surgeon's knife—and that is sure in only certain special cases. But doctors have learned to recognize cancer in its earliest stages, when it often IS CURABLE, and that is a vast gain in itself.

Moreover, experimental investigations are now on foot which give at least the hope that a specific cure may be found for all forms of cancer. Some of the lower animals are necessary victims of such experiments, and some people, who apparently love dogs more than they love men and women, make a great outcry over that fact. Such people, whose sentimentalism has gone astray, may be disregarded when the object in view is an almost immeasurable blessing to humanity. It would probably be impossible to find anywhere men endowed with a more sympathetic nature, and a greater desire to banish suffering from the world, than those very experimenters.

Terrible Figures

Since, after all, selfishness is at the bottom even of the soul of the sentimentalist, some of the objectors to animal experimentation as a basis for improved medical science may hesitate in their blind opposition when they are informed that statistics show that one out of every fifteen men, and one out of every eight women who have passed the age of thirty-five years, is doomed to die of some form of cancer.

This is not to say that death by cancer is a mere lottery. It is not as if fifteen men, or eight women, shut up in a room, were required to draw from an urn containing either fourteen white balls and one black ball, or seven white and one black, with the certainty that the unfortunate who drew black must die a terrible death. The meaning is that, on the average, out of every fifteen men and eight women past thirty-five years of age who surely possesses the seeds of cancer, which will eventually develop. It is as if in the room there were a fly having an unerring sense enabling it to detect the presence of the undisclosed cancer. The person on whom that fly alighted would be the victim designed by fate. All the others might be perfectly safe because they did not bear the fatal mark. But, according to the statistics, there would in the long average surely be ONE in every such assemblage who would carry the hidden designation.

Sometimes the doctor can detect the fatal blight or the probability of its existence, but generally even he can know nothing about it until the disease visibly declares itself. Then, if instant action is taken, in some cases of external cancer he can effect a cure with the aid of the knife. The object of the specialists now is to find some remedy which will act upon the disease wherever it may be located. You will read in the article to which I have referred what has been done with such means as radium and the X rays and certain chemicals. You will also find there what has been learned about the causes of cancer, what shout the means of detecting it at an early stage, when it may still be curable and what is the nature of the hopes which the searchers for a specific are entertain. The man who is foremost in this search, and upon whom the expectant eyes of the world rest, is the German, Dr. Ehrlich, who recently discovered a specific for another disease which had been regarded as hopeless.

What It Would Mean

Suppose that Dr. Ehrlich shall succeed as he may do any day, what would be the ultimate consequence. The last of the major diseases that shorten human life and cause endless suffering would have been conquered. This does not mean that they would immediately disappear, but there would be good reason to hope that they might all be eventually eliminated, so that, after a time, death would only occur either as a result of accident or disorder or of simple old age. Men would live longer and their lives would be relatively free from suffering.

But would they be content even with that condition? Not in the least. The next effort would be still further to prolong life. Then the question would be seriously debated—as it has, indeed already been debated—whether death itself might not be banished. It is not in the nature of man to be content, and his Creator did not intend that he should be content. His wonderful powers were given to him in order that he might always seek to better his condition. He was not placed in the position of a Sisiphus, doomed to pass all his time in pushing a stone up hill, only to see it tumbling you down again. He DOES GAIN something every day. His progress is slow, but yet certain. He was not into a world full of enemies and given the means of combating those enemies. Many of them he has already conquered, but many yet defy him. When he has mastered all of his diseases a new field for the exercise of his genius will open before him. It is did not he would WISH TO DIE, and might reluctantly quit the scenes as friends, for there is no happiness for human nature except in marching forward and accomplishing something.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"IT'S a mighty queer world this world that we're living in," said the Manicure Lady. "A girl friend of mine was in here today and told me about the kind of a job she had getting a position. She is kind of unlucky, George."

"I know what you mean," said the Head Barber. "You mean she is unlucky enough to be pretty. You don't need to tell me anything about pretty girls looking for theatrical positions," he concluded.

"I knew some of them theatrical offices was kind of bad," said the Manicure Lady, "but I never knew how much luckier I am to be a manicure girl than a chorus girl until my little pal told me some of the talk she had handed to her. I guess there ain't enough big, clean boys in the world, George—the kind that could walk into that kind of an office with four of the cheap fellers sitting around in mahogany desks, lock the door, and come out with the key, leaving death and devastation in his track. Gee, I could love a hold-up man out West—one of the chaps that it all the time facing bullets or lynching, but spare me from them little, cheap, sneaky rats that take any kind of advantage of a girl's position in life. I got a few of them in here now and then, you know, George."

"I don't know," said the Head Barber angrily. "Ever since the time I walloped that cheap drummer with a shaving mug that belonged to another fighting man, you have been afraid to tell me anything. That's the trouble with girls. They stand for all the rough stuff, talk and all, because they don't want to make a scene. What's a scene, anyway, after it is all over? Many a man has had to make a scene just for the sake of teaching another man a lesson."

"I know you are awful brave, George," admitted the Manicure Lady with a beaming smile of admiration. "That was sure grand, the way you beaned that fellow with that shaving mug. And it said on the mug 'Remember me,' too. That struck me kind of funny at the time, because the part of the mug that landed nearest to me after it had bounced off his block had them words on it—'Remember me,' I guess he won't ever forget you."

"I didn't want to break that mug," said the Head Barber, "but the gent I broke it on is a kind of rough mug himself, and I am too long in the league to go picking a fight with a man that bounces up after you knock him down. I have to use my hands for shaving, kiddo. I don't want to break them up on a bully."

"Brother Wilfred said the same thing the other night," remarked the Manicure Lady. "Him and me was walking home and a big stiff on the corner near the house said, 'Pipe the long-haired guy with the queen.' I thought at the time that Wilfred was going to take it up, but when we got home, and I asked him about it, he said that he didn't want to break up his hands. I guess shaving mugs and other crockery IS kind of handy, after all."

Do You Know That—

A lighthship has just been placed in commission in Germany that is provided with a complete equipment of the most modern devices for aiding and warning mariners, in place of the old-fashioned mast-beacons, the vessel carries a large powerful electric light set on top of a hollow mast or mast, through which the light can be reached in stormy weather. The lighthship has wireless telegraph and fog and submarine signals. Diesel oil engines run a dynamo, and two large accumulator batteries store the electric current for emergency use. The new vessel is 150 feet long and 25 feet wide. It will be stationed near the shallows at the mouth of the River Elbe.

For some time in Vienna street savings banks have been in vogue with considerable success. The savings banks are an adaptation of the penny-in-the-slot machine. Anyone paying wishing to deposit a small sum drops his money into the slot, instead of receiving bon-bons or chocolate in return, he gets a ticket for the coin deposited. The tickets are later honored on presentation at a government department. Encouraged by the success of the Vienna experiment the people of Paris are to introduce the same system into their streets.

Demanding the Impossible

By DOROTHY DIX

A WOMAN who has been married six years, and says she's never had a single peaceful day in them, wants to know how to please a hypercritical husband. She says,

"My husband is very particular about his food, and complains if everything is not perfectly cooked, yet after I have spent hours over the stove preparing a dinner to his liking he grumbles because I smell of the kitchen.

"He says I don't need enough, then when I rest he complains of my wasting my time over novels instead of looking after my house.

"He finds fault with me because I am not stylishly dressed, yet when I want a new gown he complains of my extravagance.

"He says I'm not companionable enough, yet when I go out with him he shows that he's bored to death and wishes that I had stayed at home.

"How can I please such a man as this?"

You can't. A lady angel from heaven couldn't. The only way to deal with that kind of a disgruntled grouch is to let him alone, and go along and do the way you want to without any reference to him. He wouldn't be pleased, any way, so you had as well please yourself.

This man has an aggravated case of a very common failing among husbands, and that is they expect the impossible from their wives. They demand that their wives shall be lightning change artists, who can be household drudges one minute and society butterflies the next; who can do the cooking, and washing, and ironing, and sewing and mending, and baby tending for a family, and yet always appear with beautifully manicured, lily white hands, and dressed in silk and lace party gowns, and be able to hand out a line of brilliant and entertaining small talk when hubby comes home.

Very Unreasonable

Of course, this is extremely unreasonable. The woman who does her own work is bound to have rough and work-hardened hands. She is bound to be tired and nerve wrecked. It takes money and leisure and ease of body and mind for a woman to be able to keep herself calm and serene and beautiful; dressed and up to the minute in conversation.

Honestly, when you see what men expect of their wives, it does look as if there was a good deal to say in favor of polygamy. Certainly being a wife is a two-woman job, for if any man got what he thinks are his just deserts in matrimony, it would require one wife to look after his physical comfort, and bear and rear his children for him, and another wife to entertain him, and go about with him, and always look like a living picture. And both ladies would have their hands full, believe me.

The law of the land and the high code of living preventing this simple solution of the problem, a man falls back upon the expedient of expecting his wife to combine all sorte of antagonistic qualities in her one person, and to be able to turn out every sort of varied performance. He expects her to be Mary Ann in the kitchen and Queen Ann Jo the parlor; to be able to get a dinner with one hand and play the piano with the other; to dress like a fashion plate and spend no money.

He even marries on this platform. He picks out for a wife a silly little debutante who rolls her eyes at him and asks him foolish questions, and then he is horribly disappointed in her because she isn't a wise, experienced, broad-gauged woman. He selects a girl because she is beautiful, and dainty, and helpless, and then complains if she isn't practical. He will even marry a professional woman and then feels himself ill-used because she knows more about temperament than she does the proper temperature to bake bread.

Yet the very man who expects the impossible of his wife is not illogical enough to look for miracles to happen anywhere else. He wouldn't buy an automobile and expect it to turn into a church organ. He wouldn't pick out a steak in a butcher shop and expect to find it converted into ice cream when he got home. He wouldn't expect his dog to suddenly burst into song like a canary, but he does expect just as utterly incongruous things to take place in a woman as soon as the marriage ceremony is read over her.

Nor are men alone in expecting the impossible of the ones they marry. Women have a talent for that, too, and sometimes the complaints that we hear from wives are simply the result of ladies demanding that their bread and butter shall also be currant cake.

Another Side

You hear plenty of women, resplendent in imported finery, sighing because their poor, dear dollies are so shabby, and making that they haven't time to attend Browning circles, and Ibsen matinees. Sometimes these wives even go so far as to consider that their husbands' lack of appreciation justifies them in having long-haired, high-browed affinities with whom they can discuss the whatness of the ain't and other throbbing propositions.

And you see other women married to literary or artistic men who lament that they have more companionship than dollars, and who are dissatisfied because their husbands can't make as much money as a White Sewer Maker.

In short, the feminine ideal of a perfect mate is as impossible of realization as the masculine. No man, is at once a great money-maker and an idealist; no one can make a fortune in the grocery trade and hold his wife's hand at the same time, any more than a woman can be both a leader of fashion and a housekeeper.

It is because men and women expect the impossible of each other that marriage is so often a failure.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

Mrs. De Tweep (who is short-sighted)—Good morning, Mrs. Simpkins! Your husband must be fond of gardening. I saw him the first thing this morning down in the bottom of the garden. And how well he looks, to be sure!

Mrs. Simpkins turned her back and slammed the door in her neighbor's face. The latter school went to tell her daughter.

"And you told her, mother, that the thing in the rose bed was her husband?"

"Of course I did!"

"Well, that's not her husband; that's a scarecrow!"

"He vows that I'm the first girl he ever kissed."

"Do you think he is not telling the truth?"

"I don't know. If he is he must have practised on a dummy."

"A lawyer?" answered the father. "Well, my son, a lawyer is a man who gets two men to strip for a fight and then runs off with their clothes."

The required promise was duly obtained.

"You may rely upon me," said the big man. "Friday, the 25th, in the parish room. It's quite an insectarian affair, I suppose?"

"Bless your heart, sir," came the reply, "the place was only lime-washed last week. You won't find nothin' of the kind on the premises."

* * *

"I'm a self-made man," said the proud individual.

"Well, you are all right, except as to your head," commented the other part of the conversation.

"How's that?"

"The part you talk with is out of proportion to the part you think with."

"Oh, Mr. Lightbend," remarked Miss Oldgirl, with a simper, "I've just seen eighteen happy Summers today."

"Only eighteen happy ones?" replied he with pity in his tone; "what an unhappy life you must have had!"

Beauty Secrets of Footlight Favorites

THE VALUE OF MENTAL CONCENTRATION.

MISS JANE WARRINGTON,
One of the Zingfield beauties in "The Winsome Widow" company.

By JANE WARRINGTON

WHEN I was asked to give my secret of beauty I had that same nervous, creeping feeling one gets on opening nights, when one is not sure of one's part, because, dear, dear reader, I have no beauty secret.

Every girl on the stage possesses some degree of good looks, but most of us have sense enough not to pose as great beauties. At least we don't do that to ourselves. As far as I can see, the very great beauties are women who have worked at being beautiful for a long time.

Not having any secrets of my own, I shall tell you those of a woman I was talking to in the basement of a great big department store the other day. She was demonstrating some sort of a toaster that she had invented herself and she was a very handsome looking woman, who might have been thirty-five or so. She had a good figure, black hair, natural; blue black eyes, and a full round face with not a wrinkle on it.

"These things," said the demonstrator of the toasting machine, as she looked at me with a smile, pointing to the rouge and the eyebrow pencil, "these things will never make one beautiful, though they do create the illusion of beauty from the other side of the footlights.

The Secret

"If you want to be beautiful, you must think beauty, you must WILL yourself to be beautiful."

When she said this her eyes flashed, and she spoke exactly as if she were on the stage acting the leading lady.

"How do you THINK yourself beautiful, and how do you WILL yourself to be beautiful if you are not?"

"I have willed myself to be beautiful since I was a girl of your age," said the saleswoman. "But I was not a pretty girl, like you. I'll put that in because that is what she said, though I don't want to flatter myself.) She went on:

"I was a plain, awkward, ugly girl, with eyes too big for her face, and a mouth that was just a slit, hollow cheeks and an undeveloped figure, but I adored beauty. I wanted to be beautiful more than anything else in the world, and I determined that I would be as nearly beautiful as a person with my limitations could be."

"Please tell me just how you began," I questioned her, and wished I had a notebook like a regular reporter.

"To begin with, I studied the people that I met, picking out those who were the best looking, and I tried to find out what their secrets were. In almost every case the best looking women were the healthiest and the happiest. They led normal, busy lives, that kept their minds occupied with pleasant thoughts, and they did not do any of the things which are destructive to beauty, as I found out later.

A Destructive Habit

"Those destructive things are often taken up as fads. One of them is prevalent just now among women of a certain class, and is smoking. Hundreds and hundreds of women and young girls smoke without realizing that this vicious habit will rob them of every vestige of good looks. Another thing that destroys your beauty is alcohol in any form at all. A taint is gossiping and malicious and asking thoughts of other people.

"A fourth is uncleanliness, either mental or physical. A bath is luxurious, also means of physical. If you want to be good-looking you must work. While you are very young you work to enhance the qualities which nature has given you; later on you must work even harder to keep these gifts from rusting and disfiguring. The woman who lets herself get hideously fat—and fat is a disease, as it frequently is—is lazy. The woman who is mentally indolent may have beautiful features and a good complexion, but she cannot figure among those women whom I call beautiful, who combine mental and physical gifts which interest and charm every one.

"For myself, I have never let myself get lazy. My work is constantively beautiful, though I have invented this little machine which is making me fairly well off, and I tell you how old I am! Almost old enough to be your grandmother! I am fifty-five years of age.

Well, I was struck dumb, for I would have said thirty-five, and not a day more, and you know we get to be good judges of age on the stage. I think her secrets in beauty are worth remembering. I am going to remember them, and put them to use, and perhaps when I am fifty-five I will look as young and attractive as she does, and will have a healthy, trim figure and a face free from lines.

"LATIST authority. That doesn't mean a final one. Suppos'n that it was hypnotism! Did that wouldn't account for Mrs. Spry's death. Her wound certainly was not a self-inflicted one."

"How can you be sure?"

"There was no weapon found in the room or in the court. The snow was searched and the children, too. No weapon, Mr. Grace, not even a paper cutter. Besides—but how did Mr. Challoner take what you said? Was he satisfied with this assurance?"

"He had to be. 'I didn't dare to hold out any hope based on so unsubstantial a theory. But the interview had this effect upon me. If the possibility remains of fixing guilt elsewhere than on Miss Challoner's inconsiderate impulse, I am ready to devote any amount of time and strength to the work. To see this grieving father relieved from the worst part of his burden is worth some effort, and now you know why I have listened so eagerly to you. Sweetwater, I will go with you to the superintendent. We may not gain his attention, and again we may. If we don't—but we won't cross that bridge prematurely. When will you be ready for this business?'

"'I must be at headquarters tomorrow.'

"'Good, then let it be tomorrow. A tailish, Sweetwater. The subway for that young. I can no longer manage the stairs.'"

A Concession

"'IT is true; there seems to be something extraordinary in the reticidence."

Thus Mr. Brotherson, in the presence of the inspector.

"But that is all there is to it," he easily proceeded. "I knew Miss Chaloner, and I have already said how much and how little I had to do with her death. The other woman I did not know at all; I did not even know her name. A precaution based on grounds so flimsy as those you advance would savor of persecution, would it not?"

The inspector, surprised by this unexpected attack, regarded the speaker with an interest rather augmented than diminished by his boldness. The smile with which he had uttered these concluding words yet lingered on his lips, lighting up features of a mould too suggestive of command to be associated readily with guilt. That the impression thus produced was favorable was evident from the tone of the inspector's reply:

"We have said nothing about prosecution, Mr. Brotherson. We hope to avoid any such extreme measures, and that we may the more readily do so, we have given you this opportunity to make such explanations as the situation, which you yourself have characterized as remarkable, seems to call for."

"I am ready. But what am I called upon to explain? I really cannot see, sir. Knowing nothing more about either case than you do, I fear that I shall not add much to your enlightenment."

"You can tell us why with your seeming culture and obvious means you choose to spend so much time in a second-rate tenement like the one in Hicks street."

Again that chill smile preceding the quiet answer:

"Have you seen my room there? It is piled to the ceiling with books. When I was a poor man, I chose the abode suited to my purse and my passion for first-rate reading. As I grew better off, my time became daily more valuable. I have never seen the hour when I felt like moving that precious collection. Besides, I am a man of the people. I like the working class, and am willing to be thought one of them. I can find time to talk to a hard-pushed mechanic as easily as to such members of the moneyed class as I encounter on stray evenings at the Hotel Clermont. I have led—I may say that I am leading a double life; but of neither am I ashamed, nor have I any cause to be. Love drove me to ape the gentlemen in the halls of the Clermont; a blood human interest in the work of the world to live as a fellow among the mechanics of Hicks street."

"But why make use of one name as a gentleman of leisure and quite a different one as the honest workman?"

"Ah, there you touch upon my real secret. I have a reason for keeping my identity quiet till my invention is completed."

"A reason connected with your anarchistic tendencies?"

"Possibly." But the word was uttered in a way to carry little conviction. "I am not much of an anarchist," he now took the trouble to declare, with a careless lift of his shoulders. "I like fair play, but I shall never give you much trouble by my manner of insuring it. I have too much at stake. My invention is dearer to me than the overthrow of present institutions. Nothing must stand in the way of its success, not even the satisfaction of inspiring terror in minds alert to every other species of argument. I have uttered my last speech; you can rely on me for that."

"We are glad to hear it, Mr. Dunn. Physical overthrow carries more than the immediate sufferer with it."

If this were meant as an irritant, it did not act successfully. The social agitator, the political demagogue, the orator whose hooved tones had rung with biting invective in the ears of the United Brotherhood of the Awl, the Plane and the Trowel, simply bowed and calmly waited for the next attack.

Perhaps it was of a nature to surprise even him.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Resinol cured itching sores on face

Awful to Look At, Sleep Broken

ST. LOUIS, MO.—"At about eleven years of age my face was covered with a mass of scabby sores, awful to look at, and my sleep was broken up by the intense itching, and then after scratching, the sores would pain me just something awful. My mother got salves and soaps to use, but all to no purpose. A friend of mine who was Physical Director at the Y. M. C. A. at that time, told me it was a bad case, and would spread all over the body if something were not done. He gave me some Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and in less than two weeks I was cured, without leaving any marks or scars whatever." SULZER CONTINUES 2 BATTLESHIP FIGHT IN FACE OF CAUCUS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—Continuing his fight for two battleships in the face of a democratic caucus declaring for one battleship, Representative Sulzer, of New York, sought out his allies today to urge that they remain firm in their demands for an adequate navy.

The first House caucus on battleships declared for no battleships at all. This last caucus has declared for one battleship. Another caucus would declare for two battleships or remove all caucus restrictions," was the argument he used.

Speaker Clark and other leaders pleaded with Mr. Sulzer to let up on his campaign for two battleships, so that the party might become harmonized.

"I want harmony," Mr. Sulzer told them, "but I don't care for party harmony at the expense of the navy and of the national defense."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

Local Market Is Quiet, with Prices Irregular

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, Aug. 16.—Midday—The Boston market was quiet and irregular this morning with wolverine down a point, and Mayflower, Greene-Cananea, Old Colony and Shannon among losses to sell fractionally lower. Among issues showing advanced were Granby, Massachusetts Mining, Superior & Boston and Arizona Commercial.

During the first hour American Telephone & Telegraph was an active stock. In about forty minutes nearly 1,000 shares were traded in, the price ranging from 140 to 140.

Copper exports for the week ending yesterday showed a decrease of 1,772 tons, compared with the same week in 1911. The comparative decrease in exports for August to that date was 4,296.

New York Opens Irregular.

The New York market was irregular at the opening and Canadian Pacific sustained the greatest loss, going down 1% in the transactions because, it was said, of profit taking in London. This stock opened in New York at 230½ after having closed last night at 231½. Later it rallied, going to 230½. The following other gains were scored at the outset: Amalgamated ½, American Smelting ½, Atchison ¼, Lehigh Valley ¼, Missouri Pacific ⅜, Southern Railway ¼.

Among the losses were Steel ¼, Reading 1, Union Pacific ¼ and Southern Pacific ¼. Erie Common was unchanged. Much of the pressure here was held to be due to profit taking.

The Curb was heavy.

In the London market American stocks turned heavy after a rally. Consols advanced there and the market today was more cheerful.

Early trading in the New York market was influenced to some extent by a disposition to await Senate action on the Steel bill. Finding that stocks were not freely supplied at concessions, some traders quickly changed positions and there was some short covering. Talk caused a moderate rally.

Copper Lower in London.

The copper warrants market opened quiet in London and with quotations a little lower. Spot and futures were off 1s. 3d.

The New York Sun says that foreign users of copper have been operating under great pressure for months and that consumption in the United States has likewise broken all records, adding: "The American Brass Company has been using at the rate of 7,000 tons of copper a month, or more than 14,000,000 pounds. This enormous total is greater than the output of any mine controlled by a like period, with the exception of the Amalgamated properties, which, however, include a score of mines."

Financial News in Brief.

Canadian Pacific yesterday touched 233, which was a climb of 56½ points since the date in March last when it touched the low for the year.

The next Government crop reports are due on Sept. 3, when the condition of cotton on Aug. 25 will be stated and on Sept. 9, when corn, Spring wheat, oats, barley, buckwheat, potatoes, tobacco, flaxseed, rice, apple and hay conditions will be summarized.

Steel orders booked yesterday amounted to 40,000 tons and they are for delivery next year. The total of orders placed within about two weeks is 225,000 tons.

The extension plans of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation provide for the construction of six open hearth furnaces with daily capacity of seventy-five tons each and a gas tank which will hold 1,000,000 cubic feet.

It is denied that Standard Oil is backing a scheme to extract sulphur from the ground at the mouth of the Brazos river in Texas by the Henry Frasch method. The rumor was said that the expenditure of $30,000,000 was contemplated.

August 29 is the date set for the meeting at which Louisville & Nashville directors are expected to take definite action concerning the authorization of $50,000,000 new stock. The latest report about this piece of financing, however, is that only $20,000,000 of the new issue will be offered to stockholders at once. On this basis they could subscribe for one share of new stock for every three of old. On a valuation of $198 a share for old stock, rights would be worth about $17.

Chemung Copper stockholders at a special meeting held in Duluth decided to accept the Phelps, Dodge & Co. proposition to purchase the company's holdings for $1,350,000. The company owes about $100,000, and after debts are paid the balance will yield stockholders about $6 a share.

South Dakota is worried over a prospective car shortage at crop moving time. It is estimated that 50,000,000 bushels of wheat, 50,000,000 of oats, 30,000,000 of barley, 8,000,000 of rye and 3,000,000 of flax will be ready for market at the same time, and before they can be moved the enormous corn crop and one of potatoes of no mean magnitude, will be ready.

It is believed in New York that when the resignation of President Fowler of the New York, Ontario & Western is accepted he may be made chairman of the board. The stockholders will hold their annual meeting on Sept. 20. The only sum so far suggested as President Fowler's probable successor is President Seldon of the New Haven system.

It is said in Chicago that the business of the Western Electric Company for the seven months ending with July was at the rate of more than $67,000,000 a year.

Two more Standard Oil subsidiaries have declared dividends. That of the Prairie Oil & Gas Company of Kansas is $9 a share and that of the Ohio Oil is $1.25.

The Bay State Street Railway Company is authorized by the Railroad Commission to issue 14,700 additional shares of common stock at $100 a share for extensions and improvements.

LYNN AUTHORITIES PROBE MYSTERY OF DRIVERLESS AUTO

The Lynn police are today trying to locate the driver of an automobile which crashed into the machine of R. C. Saunders of No. 40 Mountfort street, on Lynn boulevard, late last night, injuring two men.

The car, apparently, was driverless at the time of the crash. The accident was a strange one. Saunders said while driving toward Revere he saw coming, fifty feet away, a touring car, which had no lights. The machine crashed into his car and threw him and a man who was with him out on the road. The two cars locked around, but were unable to see any indications of life about the larger machine.

The police believe that the driver of the touring car ran away. Saunders and his companion were both taken to the Lynn hospital. Saunders' car had a front wheel torn off, the head lamps and glass front smashed, an axle twisted and the mud guard and foot board on one side demolished. The damage to the larger car was a broken head lamp, a twisted axle and a burst tire.

The big car, a seven-passenger machine, bore the registration number 26,724. According to the list of the Highway Commission it is owned by Israel P. Hiss of No. 302 Boston avenue, Medford. Mr. Hiss could not be located by telephone.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

David Bruce-Brown and Ralph De Palma, the racing drivers, have returned to a new sport. They are going to ride a motorcycle race next Thursday night at Brighton Beach. The distance will probably be five miles and the prize was put up by the track management.

De Palma has ridden in motorcycle races and Bruce-Brown is familiar with the power cycles. He rides around the streets on one now and then when he has not one of his fleet racing cars handy. It ought to be a good race, with the odds favoring De Palma because of his greater experience.

Harry Hadford is now vice-president and general manager of the Cartercar Company, with complete charge of the Cartercar factory at Pontiac, Mich. At a recent meeting of the board of directors he was elected to the office of vice-president, and the general managership was turned over to him. He will have the engineering, purchasing, manufacturing and advertising departments and selling organization under Mr. Hadford's jurisdiction.

For several years Mr. Hadford has held the position of sales manager of the Cartercar Company, and his work in this department has merited the recognition now given his ability. About a year ago he became general sales manager.

The first big automobile race in which a Silent Knight car has started was over the Milwaukee speedway at Independence, Ia., which a Mercedes-Knight car made the phenomenal average of seventy-eight miles an hour. This sensational performance was the curtain-raiser for the recent Belgian Grand Prix, in which a team of three Mercedes-Knight cars finished in a tie with another foreign team for first place, the trophy being the King's Cup.

The Mercedes-Knight makers were granted the privilege of giving an exhibition run and the time record was officially recognized. Weather and road conditions were identical with those of the days of the cup contest. It is estimated that at some portions of the circuit, which is irregular and abounds in stiff ascents, that the Mercedes-Knight registered the speed of eighty-five miles an hour.

"To Holders of Licenses Issued by the Licensing Board for the City of Boston and to Others Interested Therein

"The Licensing Board announces that during the balance of the license year no application for the sale of so-called license papers, except for death, bankruptcy, or other imperative reasons, will be considered by it after October 1, 1912.

WANTED—A NAME? NO, FOUR OF 'EM

What shall the Seeley girl quadruplets be named? They are now known as Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4. They are eleven days old today.

Who will suggest suitable names for them?

NEW NAMES FOR QUADRUPLETS

There's a great deal in a name, and more when the names are given to quadruplets. The already famous Seeley quadruplets of Dorchester are eleven days old today, splendid health, but are still unnamed. The mother of the quadruplets believes they are twins, as she has not been told the whole story.

The AMERICAN is receiving scores of letters suggesting names for the Seeley quadruplets. Some of these letters which came today follow:

Will Help Some.

Editor AMERICAN: For the Seeley babies, Esther Marie, Kathleen Alice, Ines Patricia and Ethel Rosemary.

Cambridge. B. B. BROADWAY.

Editor AMERICAN: Permit me to suggest names for the Seeley quadruplets, viz., Rose, Rosa, Rosine and Rosina.

Boston. GEORGE CONNOR.

Editor AMERICAN: I noticed a request in your paper last night for names for the Seeley quadruplets. I have four names I am sending which I think suitable, Alta, Leda, Rita and Metta. All girl names of course, as mine and odd and pretty. I think.

Dorchester. MRS. MYER.

Editor AMERICAN: I see by last evening's AMERICAN the famous Seeley quadruplets are looking for names. Here are some I should suggest: Beatrice, Betty, Bertha and Ray, Seeley's four B's. Hoping they will receive some as pretty, that they will grow up and be a comfort to their parents and wishing them the best of luck, I am,

CONSTANT READER.

Northampton.

Editor AMERICAN: Noticing the suggestions in this evening's paper as to naming the Seeley babies, kindly allow me space in your valuable paper with these names. They are arranged alphabetically and end with "le": Amelie, Bessie, Carrie and Daisie or Dorie.

MRS. ED. A. BEVERLEY.

Roxbury

Editor AMERICAN: When a child, my grandmother told me she had been to see four babies at a birth, and they were going to name them Wonderful, Marvelous, Amazing and Strange. Of course I believe it.

Roxbury. J. C.

Editor AMERICAN: I have felt very much interested in the Seeley quadruplets, and have looked in the papers each day as soon as they came to see how they were prospering. Seeing the article in your paper last night asking someone to suggest names, thought there would be no harm in sending in four which seemed to me appropriate: Vera, Verna, Violet, Vivian.

Haverhill. MRS. L. L. P.

How About Theodora?

Editor AMERICAN: I beg to submit a few names for the babies of Mr. and Mrs. Seeley, as your paper suggested: Theodora, Elbora, Lenora and Theora; Roberta, Alberta, Silberta and Augusta; Mildred, Marion, Myra and Merle.

Worcester. MRS. S. WHITELEY.

$200,000 LOSS, 2 HURT AT NEW YORK FIRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Three firemen were overcome by smoke, two of them seriously that they will probably die, and a loss of $200,000 was caused by a fire early today which partially destroyed a seven story loft building at Nos. 27, 29 and 31 Bleecker street. CREDIT MEN HAVE JOLLY GOOD TIME AT PARAGON PARK

A hundred or more Boston business men, members of the Boston Credit Men's Association, took possession of Paragon Park and made merry. It was the occasion of their third annual outing.

It was whispered that some one had seen Arthur E. Stone, who is a bank man and consequently very astute, riding the wooden horses. Then, too, some tales of how Secretary Whiting had slid down the sand bumps and how Vice-President Austin H. Wiswall and Harry Humphrey had worn out the bullseye and broken all the clay pipes in a shooting gallery; how the provision representative, L. W. Farmer, E. L. Rich, L. B. Noyes and Charles Corwin, had tried new cane ringing and had won white fuzzy lambs—almost; how ex-President George H. Graves was discovered feeding the sea lions and how Frederick A. Stearns and Charles Fletcher became lost children in the Japanese maze.

The Mistake of "Modifying" the Patriotism of the Senate

The inspiring patriotism of the Senate in granting free tolls to ALL American ships using the Panama Canal has been "edited" by the conference committee, and to no good purpose.

The British lobby, which for weeks has been seeking to place British vessels on an equality with American vessels in the American-built canal, has succeeded in effecting a compromise. American coastwise vessels will pass through the canal toll free. But American vessels engaged in foreign trade must pay tolls.

Thus to palter with compromise on a question that should be met with patriotism alone is wholly un-American.

American brains conceived the idea of digging the canal, or, at least, of making it a reality.

American money taken from willing American pockets paid for it.

American ingenuity and enterprise surmounted the well-nigh insuperable difficulties in the way of its construction.

Americans should have profited from it—not partially, but wholly.

For Great Britain to send to this country a lobby to defeat the purposes of the canal was nothing short of an unfriendly act.

For American agencies, tied to British interests by bonds of mutual profit, to co-operate with the British lobby was not only unpatriotic, but treasonable.

To secure the admission of coastwise vessels flying the American flag free of tolls is something—but it is not enough. The British interests and their American agents at Washington have gained something, when they should have been permitted to gain nothing.

Of the other features of the bill more hereafter. In this instance the desire for compromise has led the conferees to palter with patriotism.

The Senate, which voted on an American question in an American fashion, has been misrepresented on the committee.

As for the House, which brought about the compromise, its behavior has been as thoroughly un-American as its attitude on the naval bill, which succeeded in crippling the American defences and lowering the standing of the nation in the eyes of the world.

The Boston Tax Rate Is $16.40—An Achievement

The People of Boston Should Appreciate It for All That It Signifies

The Boston tax rate has just been announced for the ensuing year. It remains at $16.40 on a thousand.

This is a real achievement of the Fitzgerald administration, and the people of Boston should appreciate it for all that it signifies.

It signifies more than appears in the mere statement that the tax rate has not been raised because the city expenditures have been increased very materially in respect to matters beyond the Mayor's control.

In his administration Mayor Fitzgerald has paid more than $600,000 for improvements and other necessary city expenditures which under other administrations were paid for out of borrowed money, charged against future administrations.

Again the city under Mayor Fitzgerald was obliged to contribute almost $500,000 more for the expenses of the State government than it paid before, in addition to the city's expenditures for municipal and county purposes.

Still again, the increase in the cost of food supplies has increased greatly the expense of the public institutions maintained by the city.

Again, wages of city employes have been steadily increased to meet the increased cost of living during Mayor Fitzgerald's administration.

If the Mayor had held the city expenses at the level of the expenses under the preceding budget, the tax rate would be $16.61 instead of $16.40, on account of the increase of the Commonwealth's share of the city expenditures alone.

But the administration reduced the expenditure sufficiently not only to meet this increase of State assessment, but also to meet the increase in the cost of the public institutions and of wages due to the increase of the cost of living.

These are facts which will withstand much carping criticism of the Mayor. He has done well in this respect, and he deserves the acknowledgement of his fellow citizens.

An Agricultural College for Women

Out in the West there is a rich philanthropist who, at ninety, has decided that women should be taught how to till the land and work the farm. With that end in view he is establishing agricultural colleges, with the aid of his adopted daughter, Miss Elizabeth Coffin.

The first experiment will be started near Los Angeles, where 100 acres will be purchased and equipped. If the plan proves a success, it will be tried in other cities.

To these schools will be invited girls who desire to learn domestic science and to fit themselves at the same time to become farmers. There will be no fees. Through the work of the students it is expected the college will become self-supporting.

The Education of the Voter

No. 14—The State and the Nation

By THOMAS TAPPER

WHEN the Revolutionary War broke out the colonies were thirteen in number. They were dependents of the English Government, and subject to the English King.

Each of the thirteen colonies, however, enjoyed a certain amount of independence of self-government; just enough, in fact, to make it clear that they could very easily manage all their own affairs. By the Declaration of Independence and the struggle that secured it each one of the colonies became virtually a separate nation.

Then the colonies, with freedom won, adopted each for itself a constitution based more or less directly upon the original charter which had been granted to it by the Crown. In fact, Connecticut and Rhode Island adopted their English charter VERBATIM as their new constitution.

From 1783 to 1790 the thirteen independent States became a Union, and this Union had, in turn, to be provided with a constitution. There were then fourteen constitutions in active operation.

From that time to this, new communities have grown up and have petitioned to be admitted to the Union. This is allowed when a sufficient population is attained and a constitution submitted that is satisfactory to the Congress of the United States.

Officers of the Nation

The nation as a whole provides itself with a President, Vice-President, a Senate, a House of Representatives, and such other officers as are needed. Likewise, each State has its Governor, its Lieutenant-Governor, its Senate and House (or Assembly).

This identity in principles between State and National Government makes it necessary to define what a State may not do, or what acts the National Government may perform exclusively.

A State may not enter in alliance. It may not coin money or issue paper money. It may pass no law destroying the obligations included in contracts, and it may grant no titles of nobility.

A State may not engage in war. It may not enter into any agreement with a foreign power.

These are some of the powers denied to a State, it being recognized that they are held by the Federal Government for impartial execution in behalf of all the States.

The State, then, is obligated to conform in its acts and in its own constitution to the Constitution of the United States.

But it has its own form of government. It has the power to amend its constitution. Like the Federal Government, it has its own departments of government: (1) legislature, (2) judicial, (3) executive.

A State has a Governor and two legislative houses elected by the people. It may remove officers by impeachment. All States, except Louisiana, recognize the common-law of England, and all support a system of public schools.

Criminal acts that are committed against the authority of the Federal Government result in the perpetrator being taken to a Federal prison, while State prisons serve the same purpose when the law of the State itself has been violated.

As the thirteen original colonies were subject to England, and yet possessed some degree of Independence, so the present States united in the Union are subject to the Federal Constitution, and yet are left otherwise free to act under their own constitutions.

By the Constitution, the Federal Government regulates commerce between the United States and foreign nations. It also requires that no State shall refuse to admit the products of another State. The question of traffic and business between the States has made it necessary to establish the Interstate Commerce Commission. This commission is a body of seven members. The term of office is seven years, and the annual salary of each member is $10,000.

This Commission undertakes to regulate commerce of all kinds between the States. It investigates freight and passenger rates, the equipment of cars and locomotives. It may fix rates for common carriers. It regulates the matter of free transportation. In brief, it brings all matters arising out of the extensive transportation system of the country under central control.

Bit by bit the amazing complexity of our country's activity is being regulated and brought under control. All recent investigations of trusts will ultimately result in direct control of certain orders of business, but it will probably be some time before a practical basis of procedure and direction is secured.

Like a Department Store

The Government, like a great department store, has its many branches and its division of business. Each of these branches, like a stream that flows into a river, must ultimately reach the central point.

The frequent condemnation of the Government for failing to exercise proper direction over large enterprises is unfair. That is what it is trying to do, and gradually it is accomplishing something toward it.

With affairs of government, as with affairs of your own life, there is always something yet to be done, and when it is done new conditions will have brought up something else.

GUN MEN

By William F. Kirk

"I'VE heard about New York gun men," said my Arizona friend,
"With their sailing around the city, bringing lives to an end;
With their nicknames that frighten children, in the world of the Underneath,
With their knives that rip in the da rkness, and their blackjacks that knock out teeth,
But the more I hear of 'guerrillas,' nine men that will pick on three,
The more I think of a Western gink," said Phoenix Phil to me.

"I knew a young fellow named Fagin," said my Arizona friend,
"With a hundred pounds of manhood, and a spine that refused to bend.
It took six horse thieves to get him—and they got him in the night.
He was always a single hander; he didn't want help, you see;
But a rat must have his companions," said Phoenix Phil to me.
